The Molecule Hunt Archaeology And The Search For Ancient Dna:

The Molecule Hunt: Archaeology and the Search for Ancient DNA Martin Jones, 2011-11-07 A revolution is underway in archaeology Working at the cutting edge of genetic and molecular technologies researchers have been probing the building blocks of ancient life DNA proteins fats to rewrite our understanding of the past Their discoveries including a Mitochondrial Eve the woman from whom all modern humans descend and analyses have helped revise the human genealogical tree and answer such questions as How different are we from the Neanderthals Who first domesticated horses and ancient grasses What was life like for our ancestors Here is science at its most engaging Unlocking the Past Martin Jones, 2016-07-12 In Unlocking the Past Martin Jones a leading expert at the forefront of bioarchaeology the discipline that gave Michael Crichton the premise for Jurassic Park explains how this pioneering science is rewriting human history and unlocking stories of the past that could never have been told before For the first time the building blocks of ancient life DNA proteins and fats that have long been trapped in fossils and earth and rock have become widely accessible to science Working at the cutting edge of genetic and other molecular technologies researchers have been probing the remains of these ancient biomolecules in human skeletons sediments and fossilized plants dinosaur bones and insects trapped in amber Their amazing discoveries have influenced the archaeological debate at almost every level and continue to reshape our understanding of the past Devising a molecular clock from a certain area of DNA scientists were able to determine that all humans descend from one common female ancestor dubbed Mitochondrial Eve who lived around 150 000 years ago From molecules recovered from grinding stones and potsherds they reconstructed ancient diets and posited when such practices as dairying and boiling water for cooking began They have reconstituted the beer left in the burial chamber of pharaohs and know what the Iceman the 5 000 year old hunter found in the Alps in the early nineties ate before his last journey Conveying both the excitement of innovative research and the sometimes bruising rough and tumble of scientific debate Jones has written a work of profound importance Unlocking the Past is science at its most engaging Ancient DNA Elizabeth D. Jones, 2022-01-01 The untold story of the rise of the new scientific field of ancient DNA research and how Jurassic Park and popular media influenced its development Fun and thought provoking Jones builds a wry often wise study of science as a very human endeavor She makes a powerful case that ancient DNA research feeds off media attention as much as the media feeds off it Victoria L Herridge Nature Ancient DNA research the recovery of genetic material from long dead organisms is a discipline that developed from science fiction into a reality between the 1980s and today Drawing on scientific historical and archival material as well as original interviews with more than fifty researchers worldwide Elizabeth Jones explores the field's formation and explains its relationship with the media by examining its close connection to de extinction the science and technology of resurrecting extinct species She reveals how the search for DNA from fossils flourished under the influence of intense press and public interest particularly as this new line of research coincided with the book and movie Jurassic Park

Ancient DNA is the first account to trace the historical and sociological interplay between science and celebrity in the rise of this new research field In the process Jones argues that ancient DNA research is more than a public facing science it is a celebrity science The Long Morning of Medieval Europe Jennifer R. Davis,2016-12-05 Recent advances in research show that the distinctive features of high medieval civilization began developing centuries earlier than previously thought The era once dismissed as a Dark Age now turns out to have been the long morning of the medieval millennium the centuries from AD 500 to 1000 witnessed the dawn of developments that were to shape Europe for centuries to come In 2004 historians art historians archaeologists and literary specialists from Europe and North America convened at Harvard University for an interdisciplinary conference exploring new directions in the study of that long morning of medieval Europe the early Middle Ages Invited to think about what seemed to each the most exciting new ways of investigating the early development of western European civilization this impressive group of international scholars produced a wide ranging discussion of innovative types of research that define tomorrow s field today The contributors many of whom rarely publish in English test approaches extending from using ancient DNA to deducing cultural patterns signified by thousands of medieval manuscripts of saints lives They examine the archaeology of slave labor economic systems disease history transformations of piety the experience of power and property exquisite literary sophistication and the construction of the meaning of palace spaces or images of the divinity The book illustrates in an approachable style the vitality of research into the early Middle Ages and the signal contributions of that era to the future development of western civilization The chapters cluster around new approaches to five key themes the early medieval economy early medieval holiness representation and reality in early medieval literary art practices of power in an early medieval empire and the intellectuality of early medieval art and architecture Michael McCormick s brief introductions open each part of the volume synthetic essays by accomplished specialists conclude them The editors summarize the whole in a synoptic introduction All Latin terms and citations and other foreign language quotations are translated making this work accessible even to undergraduates The Long Morning of Medieval Europe New Directions in Early Medieval Studies presents innovative research across the wide spectrum of study of the early Middle Ages It exemplifies the promising questions and methodologies at play in the field today and the directions that beckon tomorrow

A Companion to Archaeology John Bintliff,2008-04-15 A Companion to Archaeology features essays from 27 of the world s leading authorities on different types of archaeology that aim to define the field and describe what it means to be an archaeologist Shows that contemporary archaeology is an astonishingly broad activity with many contrasting specializations and ways of approaching the material record of past societies Includes essays by experts in reading the past through art linguistics or the built environment and by professionals who present the past through heritage management and museums Introduces the reader to a range of archaeologists those who devote themselves to the philosophy of archaeology those who see archaeology as politics or anthropology and those who contend that the essence of the discipline is a hard science
