Environmental Gerontology in Europe and Latin America Diego Sánchez-González, Vicente

Rodríguez-Rodríguez, 2015-11-03 This book looks at the relationships between the physical social environment and the elderly in Europe and Latin America from the Environmental Gerontology perspective and through geographical and psychosocial approaches. It addresses the main environmental issues of population ageing based on an understanding of the complex relationships, adjustments and adaptations between different environments: home, residence, public spaces, landscapes, neighbourhoods, urban and rural environment, and the quality of life of the ageing population associated with residential strategies and other aspects related to health and dependency. The different levels of socio-spatial analysis are also explored: macro (urban and rural environments, regions and landscapes), meso (neighbourhood, public space) and micro (personal home and institution). New theoretical and methodological approaches are proposed to analyse the attributes and functions of the physical social environment of the elderly as well as new ways of living the ageing process. All will have to respond to the challenges of urbanisation, globalisation and climate change in the 21st century. Also, the different experiences and challenges of public planning and management professionals involved with the growing ageing population are presented and will require greater association and collaboration with the academic and scientific fields of Environmental Gerontology.

University-Linked Retirement Communities Leon A. Pastalan, Benjamin Schwarz, 2016-09-16 University Linked Retirement Communities focuses on the special attributes of a retirement community designed as an integral part of a university. It discusses the theoretical and practical aspects of such a retirement community which provides a rich and varied context for older people to be exposed to new ideas and learning opportunities for personal growth. The book centers on the premise that knowledge of basic principles of human behavior helps clarify understanding of the relationship between environment and behavior. Grounded in current research in the field of environment and aging, the book helps readers consider how the environment lends different aesthetic experiences and activity patterns to people of different backgrounds and capabilities. Some of the major environment and design issues chapters address are: person-environment fit, privacy, personal space, wayfinding, barrier-free design, healthcare, personal growth, site development. University Linked Retirement Communities was developed from a two-term course offered at the University of Michigan College of Architecture and Urban Planning that dealt with aging and the environment. The book is divided into two parts. Chapters in the first section discuss a variety of issues including the meaning of community, a day in the life of an elderly person living in a retirement community, site evaluation for a theoretical retirement community, and reviews of different physical components for a retirement community. The second section contains four student presentations of designs for a retirement community and comments on the projects from a design jury. This book is a valuable source of information for a variety of readers: University Linked Retirement Communities is of interest to potential users of eldercare services and their families, service providers, designers, architects, policymakers and developers dealing with the elderly, and educators and students of architecture, environmental design, and
