in those said in his eyes? He had sat by as calmly as if this anguish were quite in order. Not one single time had the flush of embarrassment or of shame risen to his face; he smacked his lips and watched the blue rings of smoke thoughtfully with his eyes; but if he spoke, his words were always "dramatic," as Aunt Sophie was in the habit of expressing herself.

The main substance of his character might be what it would, that did not concern her; it only vexed her that he should pass judgment so directly upon his dead sister's two children—the exemplary, diligent Reinhold of former days seemed to him to have lost some of his virtues, while he evidently today attributed no good qualities to the "neph." The backs of both were towards her; they appeared to be looking at some objects lying on the windowsill, and the rattling of the outside door might have drowned the rustle of the train. Now again all was so still that the first backward movement of the young girl attracted the attention of those standing at the window. Aunt Sophie turned, and for a moment seemed speechless; then she clasped her hands and laughed.

Marlitt, 2015-07-18 Excerpt from The Lady With the Rubies A Novel Aunt Sophie had tied on her big apron and was busy stowing away the clothes pegs in its ample pockets as she took her wash down from the lines She chuckled while she stepped along under the tight stretched ropes Fresh fallen snow what was that compared to the whiteness of her bleaching table cloths and sheets From time immemorial it had only been necessary to air the linen treasures of the honorable house of Lambert and Son when forthwith there came a season of the finest bleaching weather Of course there did And why not They had as good a right to a prerogative of the sort as the emperor had to his famous emperor s weather thought Aunt Sophie with a mischievous twinkle of her eye though for there was somebody in the house who positively would not listen to such blasphemies Again to day the delicious summer breeze had dried the rows of wet sheets to perfection and the July sun had seemed to concentrate all its power upon that immense square yard From over the roofs flocks of swallows shot into that court yard like glittering steel arrows their nests hung to the stone window sills of the upper story in the eastern wing and there was nobody there to disturb the little blue coats when they settled upon the sills and engaged in their ceaseless chattering Yes there was not a creature there to disturb them by a look or startling movement of the hand for never a window of this side building turned upon its hinges save for some hours in the year when the rooms were aired immediately afterward the large flowered curtains fell to again and patiently suffered the sun to absorb from them the last bit of coloring adhering to their rotten silk threads About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing
