The Study of Temperament Robert Plomin, Judy Dunn, 2013-08-21 First Published in 1986 The modern history of temperament research began in the late 1950s with the New York Longitudinal Study Twenty five years later temperament has become a major focus of research on early developing emotional and social traits The impetus for this growth in temperament research stems from the merging of several shifts in child development research from a view of the child as passive to a model of the child as an active transacting partner with the environment increasing interest in individual differences in development an expansion of research on emotional and social development and a clear change from an exclusive reliance on environmental explanations of developmental differences to a more balanced perspective that recognizes the possibility of biological as well as environmental influences Most stimulating is the multidisciplinary flavor of temperament research clinicians infancy researchers cultural anthropologists and behavioral geneticists have each for their own reasons been drawn to the study of temperament Each of these fields is represented in the present volume which provides the first overview of the growing field of temperament The Development of Intelligence Mike Anderson, 1999 Provides a contemporary review of methods and theories of the development of intellectual abilities from infancy to adulthood by the major researchers in the field Developing Brain Behaviour John Dobbing, 1997-08-13 Certain long chain polyunsaturated fatty acids LCPUFAs are thought to be essential components of the nutrition of infants including those prematurely born in the sense that they cannot be synthesised by the immature organism and must therefore be supplied in the diet Breast milk contains these substances but many manufactured infant formulae do not An absence of dietary LCPUFAs has been thought to affect the development of the brain and retina possibly leading to abnormalities in cognitive and visual function Considerable multidisciplinary research has been carried out to investigate this proposition Diets free from LCPUFAs have been compared with supplemented formulae or with breast milk The conclusions from this research were critically examined by a group of leading paediatricians nutritionists experts in visual science and developmental behavioural scientists at a Dobbing Workshop held in the United States in late February 1997 Each of the Chapters was precirculated to the whole group commented on before the Workshop and then exhaustively discussed The Chapters and Commentaries which are published here have therefore undergone a more extensive peer review process than is usually the case The Development Of Sensory, Motor And Cognitive Capacities In Early Infancy George Butterworth, Francesca Simion, 2013-06-20 Research on the development of human infants has revealed remarkable capacities in recent years Instead of stressing the limitations of the newborn the modern approach is now more optimistically based on an assessment of the adaptive capabilities of the infant Innate endowment coupled with interaction with the physical and social environment enables a developmental transition from processes deeply rooted in early perception and action to the cognitive and language abilities typical of the toddler This book reviews a number of issues in early human development It includes a reconceptualization of the role of perception at the origins of development a reconciliation of psychophysical and ecological approaches to early face perception and building bridges between biological and psychological aspects of development in terms of brain structure and function Topics covered include basic exploratory processes of early visual systems in early perception and action face perception in newborns species typical aspects of human communication imitation perception of the phonetic structure of speech origins of the pointing gesture handedness origins and development theoretical contributions on perception and cognition implicit and explicit knowledge in babies sensory motor coordination and cognition information processing and cognition perception habituation and the development of intelligence from infancy

The Development of Attention J.T. Enns, 1990-08-23 This volume presents an up to date review of developmental aspects of human attention by leading researchers and theorists The papers included in the first section consider the ways in which newborns are pretuned to visual auditory linguistic and social features of their environment as well as how selectivity to these features changes in the first year of life The following section examines properties of the visual and auditory world that are attention getting for children Developmental increases in capacity and strategy are also examined in this section through the study of perception memory problem solving and language Section III explores several ways in which selective processing can fail in development e g autism hyperactivity and psychopathy while Section IV reports on those aspects of selectivity that are lost and preserved in the aging process Published Scientific Papers of the National Institutes of Health National Institutes of Health (U.S.), 1990 Constancy and Change in Human Development Orville Gilbert Brim (Jr.), 1980 How malleable is human nature Can an individual really change in meaningful ways Or are there immutable limits on the possibilities of human growth set in place by genes and early childhood experiences These questions touch our deepest political and personal concerns and have long been a matter of fierce debate in the behavioral sciences

Handbook of Parenting Marc H. Bornstein, 2005-02-16 Despite the fact that most people become parents and everyone who has ever lived has had parents parenting remains a mystifying subject about which almost everyone has opinions but about which few people agree Striking permutations on the theme of parenting are emerging single parenthood blended families lesbian and gay parents and teen versus fifties first time moms and dads Divided into four volumes the Handbook of Parenting is concerned with different types of parents basic characteristics of parenting forces that shape parenting problems faced by parents and the practical sides of parenting Contributors have worked in different ways toward understanding all of these diverse aspects of parenting and look to the most recent research and thinking in the field to shed light on many topics every parent has wondered about Because development is too subtle dynamic and intricate to admit that parental caregiving alone determines the course and outcome of ontogeny volume 1 concerns how children influence parenting Volume 2 relates parenting to its biological roots and sets parenting in its ecological framework Volume 3 distinguishes among the cast of characters responsible for parenting and is revealing of the psychological make ups and social interests of those individuals Volume 4 describes problems of parenting as well as the promotion of positive parenting practices Written to be read and absorbed in a single sitting each chapter addresses a different but central topic in parenting and is rooted in current thinking and theory as well as classic and modern research on that topic All chapters follow a standard organization including an introduction to the chapter as a whole followed by historical considerations of the topic a discussion of central issues and theory a review of classic and modern research forecasts of future directions for theory and research and a conclusion In addition to considering their own convictions and research the chapter contributors present and broadly interpret all major points of view and central lines of inquiry
