Censoring Translation Michelle Woods, 2012-05-10 A play is written faces censorship and is banned in its native country There is strong international interest the play is translated into English it is adapted and it is not performed Censoring Translation questions the role of textual translation practices in shaping the circulation and reception of foreign censored theatre It examines three forms of censorship in relation to translation ideological censorship gender censorship and market censorship This examination of censorship is informed by extensive archival evidence from the previously unseen archives of V clav Havel s main theatre translator Vera Blackwell which includes drafts of playscripts legal negotiations reviews interviews notes and previously unseen correspondence over thirty years with Havel and central figures of the theatre world such as Kenneth Tynan Martin Esslin and Tom Stoppard Michelle Woods uses this previously unresearched archive to explore broader questions on censorship asking why texts are translated at a given time who translates them how their identity may affect the translation and how the constituents of success in a target culture may involve elements of censorship

Processing of Visible Language Paul A. Kolers,2013-11-21 The second symposium on processing visible language constituted a different mix of participants from the first Greater emphasis was given to the design of language both in its historical development and in its current display and to practical questions associated with machine implementation of language in the interactions of person and computer and in the characteristics of the physical and environmental objects that affect the interaction Another change was that a special session on theory capped the proceedings Psychologists remained heavily involved however both as contributors to and as discussants of the work presented The motivation of the conferences remains one of bringing together graphic designers engineers and psychologists concerned with the display and acquisition of visible language The papers separately tended to emphasize the one of the three disciplines that mark their authors field of endeavor but are constructed to be general rather than parochial Moreover within the three disciplines papers emphasized either the textual or the more pictorial aspects For example a session on writing systems ranged from principles that seem to characterize all such systems to specific papers on ancient Egyptian writing modern Korean and English shorthand The complementary session on the nontextual media opened with a discussion of general principles of pictorial communication and included papers on communicating instructions general information or religious belief through designs and other pictorial forms as well as a discussion of misrepresentation

The Translator as Writer Susan Bassnett,Peter Bush,2007-11-15 Over the last two decades interest in translation around the world has increased beyond any predictions International bestseller lists now contain large numbers of translated works and writers from Latin America Africa India and China have joined the lists of eminent bestselling European writers and those from the global English speaking world Despite this translators tend to be invisible as are the processes they follow and the strategies they employ when translating The Translator as Writer bridges the divide between those who study translation and those who produce translations through essays written by well known translators talking about their own work as distinctive creative literary practice The book emphasises this creativity arguing that translators are effectively writers or rewriters who produce works that can be read and enjoyed by an entirely new audience The aim of the book is to give a proper prominence to the role of translators and in so doing to move attention back to the act of translating away from more abstract speculation about what translation might involve concise and well written text provides a deeper insight into the discipline of translation and discusses all the complexities involved in translation The book discusses in detail the process of translation different types of translation and theory and principles of translation It also deals with different interdisciplinary subjects such as semiotics linguistics lexicography and socio linguistics that contribute to effective translation Finally it explains the problems of translation and the techniques for evaluating translation The book provides plenty of examples to make the concept clear The book is intended as a text for the undergraduate students of translation studies and postgraduate students of English Applied Linguistics and English and Comparative Literature

The Evolution of

Team-Based Buddhist Scripture Translation in Tang China Sai Yau Siu, 2024-07-07 Open Access This open access book provides a concise analysis of the apex of team based translation of Buddhist scriptures during the Tang Dynasty initiated by the notable gathering of translation experts led by Prabhakaramitra. Showcasing the diverse and innovative strategies of translators who joined forces to surmount barriers, this work highlights how their collaborative translation efforts facilitated the spread of Buddhist teachings throughout China. This book brings to light the often overlooked yet crucial roles of these translation teams and examines their organizational structures, translation processes, and the distinct roles of individual members, offering critical insights into the cultural and religious fabric of the period. By enhancing our understanding of the complex dynamics within these institutions, this work also addresses a significant gap in the historical study of scriptural translation in medieval China. It is an essential resource for scholars, students, and enthusiasts of Buddhism, translation studies, and Chinese history.

Contextual Frames of Reference in Translation Ernst Wendland, 2014-04-08 Bible translation theory and practice rightly tend to focus on the actual text of Scripture. But many diverse yet interrelated contextual factors also play an important part in the implementation of a successful translation program. The aim of this coursebook is to explore in varying degrees of detail a wide range of these crucial situational variables and potential influences using a multidisciplinary approach to the task. Thus, in order to expand and enrich the field of vision, a progressive study of this complex process of intercultural, interlinguistic communication is carried out according to a set of overlapping sociocultural, organizational, and situational cognitive orientations. These contextual factors provide a broader frame of reference for analyzing, interpreting, and communicating the original Scriptures in a completely new contemporary setting of transmission and reception. The three dimensions are then applied in a practical way to explore the dramatic throne room vision of the Apostle John, Revelation 4-5, with reference to both the original Greek text and also a modern dynamic translation in Chewa, a southeastern Bantu language of Africa. A variety of exercises and assignments to stimulate critical and creative reflection, as well as to illustrate the theoretical development of Contextual Frames of Reference, is provided every step of the way. Not only is translation per se discussed, but the teaching and evaluation of translated texts and versions are also considered from several points of view in the final three chapters. An Appendix offers a foundational essay by Professor Lourens de Vries on the subject of primary orality and the influence of this vital factor in the crosscultural communication of the Bible.
