

The Landlady

Billy just entered Bath, England and he needs a place to stay. The setting is Bath, England.
The characters are Billy, the porter, and the Landlady.
But the air was deadly cold and the wind was like a flat blade of ice on his cheeks. "Excuse me," he said, "but is there a fairly cheap hotel not too far away from here?"

Exposition

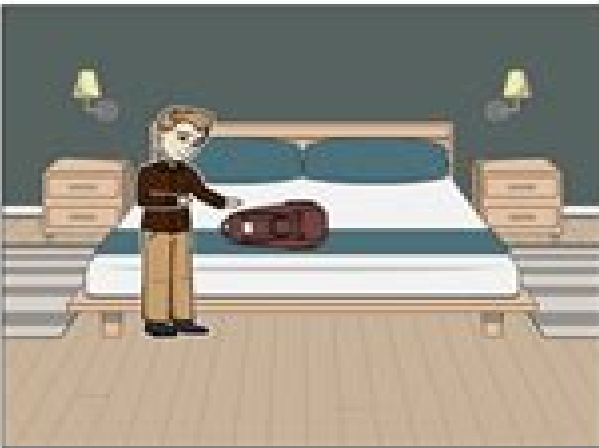

He finds a Bed and Breakfast run by an innocent old lady. This is the exposition because it starts off the story. It has set up all of the characters. "She was about forty-five or fifty years old, and the moment she saw him, she gave him a warm, welcoming smile. "Please come in," she said pleasantly. She stepped aside, holding the door wide open, and Billy found himself automatically starting forward.

Rising Action

The Landlady starts acting a bit strange but Billy brushes it off. This is a rising action because it starts to show that maybe the Landlady isn't so innocent after all. "I saw the notice in the window," he said, holding himself back. "Yes, I know." "It was wondering about a room." "It's already for you, my dear," she said. She had a round pink face and very gentle blue eyes.

Rising action

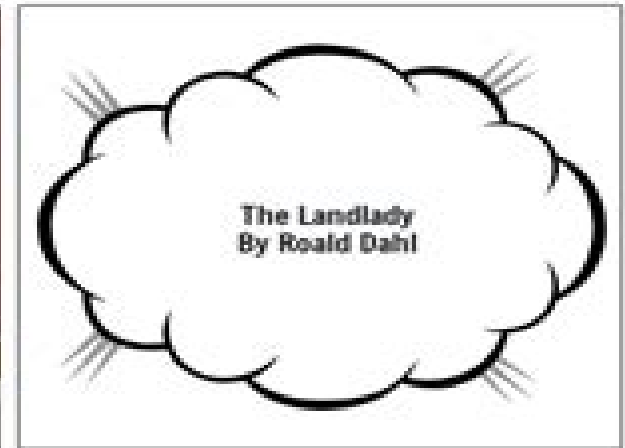

Billy brings his things to his room, then he goes down to sign the book. This is a rising action because it is an important event that sets up the climax. "Very well, then. I'll leave you now so that you can unpack. But before you go to bed, would you be kind enough to pop into the sitting room on the ground floor and sign the book? (Everyone has to do that because of the law of the land.)"

Cliffhanger

The Landlady reveals her true intentions, and the story ends. This is the climax/cliffhanger because the story is at its peak, while also being the end of the story.

The End.

This story was very engaging and very fun to read but was very disturbing at the end. Overall, it was a great story.

Translated is the first book to look at the issue of translation and Kafka's work. What effect do the translations have on how we read Kafka? Are our interpretations of Kafka influenced by the translators' interpretations? In what ways has Kafka been translated into Anglo-American culture by popular culture and by academics? Michelle Woods investigates issues central to the burgeoning field of translation studies: the notion of cultural untranslatability, the centrality of female translators in literary history and the underrepresentation of the influence of the translator as interpreter of literary texts. She specifically focuses on the role of two of Kafka's first translators, Milena Jesenská and Willa Muir, as well as two contemporary translators, Mark Harman and Michael Hofmann, and how their work might allow us to reassess reading Kafka. From here, Woods opens up the whole process of translation and re-examines accepted and prevailing interpretations of Kafka's work.

Mujong (The Heartless) Kwang-su Yi, 2010-03-31 Yi Kwang-su 1892-1950 was one of the pioneers of modern Korean literature. When the serialization of Mujong The Heartless began in 1917, it was an immediate sensation and it occupies a prominent place in the Korean literary canon. The Heartless is the story of a love triangle among three youths during the Japanese occupation. Yi Hyung-sik is a young man in his mid-twenties who is teaching English at a middle school in Seoul. Brilliant but also shy and indecisive, he is torn between two women. Kim Sun-hyung is from a wealthy Christian family; she has just graduated from a modern Western-style school and is planning on continuing her studies in the United States. Pak Yung-chae is a musically gifted young woman who was raised in a traditional Confucian manner; due to family misfortune, she has become a kisaeng but remains devoted to Hyung-sik, whom she knew as a child. The Heartless goes beyond the level of romantic melodrama and uses these characters to depict Korea's struggles with modern culture and national identity. A long critical introduction discusses Yi Kwang-su's life and work from his birth in 1892 to the publication of his first novel, The Heartless, in 1917. It contains in-depth analyses of the novel, Yi Kwang-su's literary theory, and early short stories.
