Abstract

This article focuses on Johnson & Johnson baby product compensation in practice and related case studies. This is an overview of Johnson & Johnson's baby product liability and explains issues that have arisen for consumers. Product liability is the liability of related parties in the production chain of any product for damages caused by the product. In the name of commercial profit, it is useful to protect the consumer from unnecessary risks and problems from harmful end products or malicious parties. Johnson and Johnson's case studies of defects and children's product liability issues are useful in providing the consumer with important information to deal with a similar situation and providing the manufacturer with suggestions for improvement to avoid similar problems and provide more and better consumer satisfaction and healthy production. In today's market, all corporate activities are more focused on delighting the client by attending to their needs through efficient service. Because baby products are expensive, businesses are constantly searching for the most innovative solutions. In order to ensure their child's safety and security, parents are continuously concerned with purchasing the best products available and following all safety precautions. Also this article reveals about the company's background, history, as well as problems faced by the company.

Keywords: Product liability, Johnson and Johnson, Consumers, Background, Case studies, History.

1. INTRODUCTION

Johnson & Johnson is a Fortune 500 company that manufactures pharmaceuticals and consumer items. James Wood Johnson, Robert Wood Johnson, and Edward Mead Johnson, three brothers, formed it in 1886. More than 265 countries are served by the company's businesses, which operate in more than 60 of them. Their first product was Johnson's baby powder, which arrived in India in 1947(Nandal, N et al.,2021). Baby care items are an example of a product category that consumers favoured at one point in time. When their children are older, parents will not typically exhibit a preference for the same product category; instead, they will only do so when a new baby is in their care. The relationship between a brand and its customers can take several forms. Brand repurchasing intention, brand extension acceptance, word-of-mouth (WOM), temporary deficiency acceptability, and brand commitment can be used to summarise the important ideas in brand-customer relationships. The goal is to comprehend how these variables are impacted by consumer confidence in a product category like newborn care items, where parents plan to have just a transient relationship(Kavitha M.A&ramesh.k 2017). Product liability is a significant obligation for manufacturers to maintain customer safety, particularly in the case of baby products because babies are young, vulnerable humans who require extra caution while using potentially dangerous products. Every parent wants their kids to grow up with strong, healthy bodies free from anything that could cause them to pass away. The deadly elements that work against product responsibility include poisonous, damaging, and combustible compounds. To protect the baby from harm, they should be taken out(Maksom et al., 2014).

Up to 4% of fat in infant stools can be difficult for water to completely eliminate. Similar to meconium, it is challenging to remove because of its tenacious nature. The special lotion in Johnson's Baby Skincare wipes dissolves both water- and fat-based compounds, making it possible to remove
