Midcentury Quartet Thomas J.

Travisano, 1999-12-29 In a February 1966 letter to her artistic confidant Robert Lowell Elizabeth Bishop tellingly grouped four midcentury poets Lowell Randall Jarrell John Berryman and herself For Bishop always wary of being pigeonholed and therefore reticent about naming her favorite contemporaries it was a rare explicit acknowledgment of an informal but enduring artistic circle that has evaded the notice of literary journalists for more than forty years Despite the private nature of their dialogue the group's members Bishop Lowell Jarrell and Berryman left a compelling record of their mutual interchange and influence Drawing on an extensive range of published and archival sources Thomas Travisano traces these poets' creation of a surprisingly coherent postmodern aesthetic and defines its continuing influence on American poetry The refusal of this midcentury quartet as Travisano calls them to voice a formalized doctrine coupled with their intuitive way of working has caused critics to miss the coherence of their project Travisano argues that these poets are not only successors to Pound Auden Stevens and Eliot but postmodern explorers in their own right In forging their own aesthetic characterized here as a postmodern mode of elegy they encountered significant resistance from their immediate modernist mentors Allen Tate John Crowe Ransom and Marianne Moore Jarrell whom others of the group regarded as a critic of particular genius was first described as a postmodernist in a 1941 review by Ransom that Travisano cites as the earliest known use of the term In Jarrell's review of Lowell's Lord Weary's Castle six years later he named Lowell a postmodernist and identified traits among them the use of pastiche that are now considered by theorists such as Fredric Jameson as specifically postmodern And Bishop's inventiveness allowed her to adapt a self-exploratory mode often but imprecisely termed confessional to challenging forms such as the double sonnet villanelle and sestina Each of these poets suffered a devastating loss during childhood and lived through the twentieth century disasters of the Great Depression World War II and the Holocaust and the cold war

The continual tension in their poetry between subjectivity and form claims Travisano reflects the plight of the fractured individual in a postmodern world By arguing so sharply for the importance of this circle Midcentury Quartet is certain to redraw the map of postwar American poetry
