Context John K. Riches, David C. Sim, 2005-09-14 In what sense does Matthew's Gospel reflect the colonial situation in which the community found itself after the fall of Jerusalem and the subsequent humiliation of Jews across the Roman Empire To what extent was Matthew seeking to oppose Rome's claims to authority and sovereignty over the whole world to set up alternative systems of power and society to forge new senses of identity If Matthew's community felt itself to be living on the margins of society where did it see the centre as lying In Judaism or in Rome And how did Matthew's approach to such problems compare with that of Jews who were not followers of Jesus Christ and with that of others Jews and Gentiles who were followers This is volume 276 in the Journal for the Study of the New Testament Supplement series and is also part of the Early Christianity in Context series Discovering the Roman Family K. upbringing and socialization of children and concentrating on the parts played by wet nurses and male childerminders his book molds an entirely new framework for the study of the Roman family He investigates the extent of serial marriage especially among the upper classes and the effects of the widespread familial dislocation that resulted and for the first time considers the prevalence of child labor in the Roman world contrasting the experiences of upper class and lower class children Bringing these themes together in a lively final section through a fresh thorough examination of Cicero s correspondence Bradley portrays the life of an actual Roman family A seminal contribution to Roman social history this book is essential reading for anyone interested in how the family worked and lived in classical times     Class Struggle in the New Testament Robert J.
