Students, Society and Politics in Imperial Germany Konrad H. Jarausch, 2014-07-14 Konrad H Jarausch studies the social structure of the German university and the mentality of its students during the Imperial period as an example of a wider European academic desertion of liberalism He finds that German higher education combined scientific world leadership and competent professional training with an eroding liberal education Bildung to create an educated class that was tragically susceptible to the appeal of the Third Reich Originally published in 1982 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905

Art and the German Bourgeoisie Carolyn Helen Kay, 2002-01-01 In this new study of art in fin de siècle Hamburg Carolyn Kay examines the career of the city's art gallery director Alfred Lichtwark one of Imperial Germany's most influential museum directors and a renowned cultural critic A champion of modern art Lichtwark stirred controversy among the city's bourgeoisie by commissioning contemporary German paintings for the Kunsthalle by secession artists and supporting the formation of an independent art movement in Hamburg influenced by French impressionism Drawing on an extensive amount of archival research and combining both historical and art historical approaches Kay examines Lichtwark's cultural politics their effect on the Hamburg bourgeoisie and the subsequent changes to the cultural scene in Hamburg Kay focuses her study on two modern art scandals in Hamburg and shows that Lichtwark faced strong public resistance in the 1890s winning significant support from the city's bourgeoisie only after 1900 Lichtwark's struggle to gain acceptance for impressionism highlights conflicts within the city's middle class as to what constituted acceptable styles and subjects of German art with opposition groups demanding a traditional and pure German culture The author also considers who within the Hamburg bourgeoisie supported Lichtwark and why Kay's local study of the debate over cultural modernism in Imperial Germany makes a significant contribution both to the study of modernism and to the history of German culture

Electoral Politics in Wilhelmine Germany Stanley Suval, 1985 The last national election in Wilhelmine Germany was held on 12 January 1912 Voting was one of the few acts in German society that cut across class lines The precincts were neither overwhelmingly working class nor middle class and from a distance it would have been impossible to tell those voters apart they all wore black clothing Almost all males over twenty five voted in the 1912 election and when the polls closed that Friday at 7 00 P M over 12 million men had cast their ballots 84.2 percent of those eligible Historians have tended to interpret the Wilhelmine German electorate as though voters were marched to the polls in Prussianized battalions Because the ballots determined neither the composition of the government nor the national policies the only viable explanation for the heavy voter turnouts was thought to be governmental force Electoral Politics in Wilhelmine Germany offers a new model of the German electorate which varies considerably from this interpretation Using techniques of electoral analysis developed for the study of elections in Britain and the United States Stanley Suval argues that the German voters cast their ballots freely and positively He demonstrates that the ballot was cast not to support the government or forward economic self interest but to express fundamental social relationships present in everyday life By voting individuals were fulfilling their citizenship roles by expressing their commitments to social groupings Suval defines these groupings using statistical analysis and qualitative evidence based on religious class and regional variables He states that voters undertook an act that they felt was important regardless of who won or lost Electoral Politics in Wilhelmine Germany also disputes the view that the German state worked to undermine the electoral system Suval contends that the government and its bureaucracy often unwittingly increased the prestige of electoral politics by ensuring against massive fraud and by active participation in voter mobilization The result was an integrated electoral system fueled by the commitments of the voters Thus the Weimar Republic was not crippled at birth by its Wilhelmine inheritance On the contrary the Wilhelmine electorate was as prepared for its citizenship roles as were those in most contemporary democratic countries Originally published in 1985 A UNC Press Enduring Edition UNC Press Enduring Editions use the latest in digital technology to make available again books from our distinguished backlist that were previously out of print These editions are published unaltered from the original and are presented in affordable paperback formats bringing readers both historical and cultural value German Peasants and Agrarian Politics, 1914-1924 Robert G. Moeller, 2017-10-10 Robert Moeller investigates the German peasantry's rejection of the Weimar Republic in the 1920s and provides a new interpretation of Catholic peasant conservatism in western Germany. According to Moeller, rural support for conservative political solutions to the troubled Weimar Republic was the result of a series of severe economic jolts that began in 1914 and continued unabated until 1933. During the late nineteenth century, peasant farmers in the Rhineland and Westphalia adjusted their production to a capitalist market and enjoyed an unprecedented period of prosperity that lasted until the outbreak of World War I. After August 1914, peasant producers confronted state intervention in the agricultural sector, regulation of prices and markets, and the subordination of agrarian interests to the demands of urban consumers. A controlled economy for many agricultural products continued into the postwar period. Focusing on the Catholic peasantry, Moeller shows that peasant rejection of the Weimar Republic was firmly grounded in the immediate circumstances of the war economy and the uneven process of postwar recovery. He challenges the dominant view that rural support for conservative political solutions was primarily the product of the peasantry's hostility toward industrial capitalism and of long-term social and political affinities dating from the nineteenth century. Moeller's findings show that conservative agrarian ideology was carefully formulated in response to the specific peasant grievances that originated in this period of continuing economic and political crisis. Bessel examines the changes brought by the War to Germany, including those resulting from the return of soldiers to civilian life and the effects of demobilization on the economy. He demonstrates that the postwar transition was viewed as a moral crusade by Germans desperately concerned about challenges to traditional authority, and he assesses the ways in which the experience of the War and memories of it affected the politics of the Weimar Republic This is an original and scholarly book which offers important insights into the sense of dislocation both personal and national experienced by Germany and Germans in the 1920s and its damaging legacy for German democracy Modern Germany Reconsidered Gordon Martel,2002-11 First Published in 2004 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company The German Peasantry (Routledge Revivals) Richard J.
