Customary Land Tenure and Registration in Australia and Papua New Guinea James F. Weiner,Katie Glaskin,2007-06-01 The main theme of this volume is a discussion of the ways in which legal mechanisms such as the Land Groups Incorporation Act 1974 in PNG and the Native Title Act 1993 in Australia do not as they purport serve merely to identify and register already existing customary indigenous landowning groups in these countries Because the legislation is an integral part of the way in which indigenous people are defined and managed in relation to the State it serves to elicit particular responses in landowner organisation and self identification on the part of indigenous people These pieces of legislation actively contour the progressive evolution of landowner social territorial and political organisation at all levels in these nation states The contributors to this volume provide in depth anthropological case studies of social structural and cultural transformations engendered by the confrontation between states developers and indigenous communities over rights to customarily owned land BRAC, Global Policy Language, and Women in Bangladesh Manzurul Mannan, 2015-09-01

Founded in 1972 and now the largest NGO in the world BRAC has been lauded for its efforts aimed at lifting the poor especially women out of poverty In BRAC Global Policy Language and Women in Bangladesh Manzurul Mannan while not denying the many positive accomplishments of BRAC places the organization under a critical microscope Drawing on his experience as a Bangladeshi native and BRAC insider Mannan provides unique insights into not only BRAC's phenomenal growth and its role in diffusing western and development ideologies but also more importantly how target populations have been affected culturally and socially He explains how BRAC has employed western ideas theories and philosophies of agency when engaging in development interventions in even the remotest villages seeking to transform social structures women's status and the local polity The resulting intermingling of exogenous perspectives with local knowledge leads to a degree of inconsistency and dissonance within BRAC's own operations while generating opposition from local commoners and elites Cautionary yet hopeful the book advocates greater cultural sensitivity as a way to mitigate conflict between BRAC and the constituencies it serves
