Handbook of Social Development Vincent B. Van Hasselt,Michel Hersen,2013-11-11 Social development over one s lifetime is a complex area that has received considerable attention in the psychological social psychological and sociological literature over the years Surprisingly however since 1969

when Rand McNally published Goslin's Handbook of Socialization no comprehensive statement of the field has appeared in book form. Given the impressive data in this area that have been adduced over the last two decades we trust that our handbook will serve to fill that gap. In this volume we have followed a lifespan perspective starting with the social interactions that transpire in the earliest development stages and progressing through childhood, adolescence, adulthood and finally one's senior years. In so doing we cover a variety of issues in depth. The book contains 21 chapters and is divided into five parts: I Theoretical Perspectives, II Infants and Toddlers, III Children and Adolescents, IV Adults, and V The Elderly. Each of the parts begins with introductory material that reviews the overall issues to be considered. Many individuals have contributed to the final production of this handbook. Foremost are our eminent contributors who graciously agreed to share with us their expertise. We also thank our administrative and technical staff for their assistance in carrying out the day to day tasks necessary to complete such a project. Finally we thank Eliot Werner, Executive Editor at Plenum, for his willingness to publish and for his tolerance for the delays inevitable in the development of a large handbook.

Sociogenetic Perspectives on Internalization Brian D. Cox, Cynthia Lightfoot, 2013-05-13

The issue of how the external world becomes part of the behavioral repertoire of children has been important to psychology from its very beginning, preoccupied by theorists from Sigmund Freud to George Herbert Mead. But ever since Lev Vygotsky claimed that every function in a child's activity appears first as a process in the social realm between individuals and moves to a process that individual children can accomplish relatively independently, there has been increased debate as to exactly how this process of internalization happens. In contemporary developmental psychology the process of internalization has become so important that the time is ripe for a book which explicitly addresses the problems it poses. Although the chapters in this book deal with age groups from preschool to adolescence and topics from mathematics to storytelling and from taking risks to making moral judgments, there is one core question which unifies them all: If the growing competence of a child is truly sociogenetic, if it truly grows out from is supported by and is dependent upon the social, where is that competence truly located? Bearing a variety of labels: cultural, historical, co-constructionist, dialectical, contextualist, narrative, hermeneutic and discursive psychologies and analytic constructs, scaffolding, proleptic instruction, participation, appropriation and situated activity, contemporary perspectives are showing clear signs of development and differentiation. This volume's goal is to help bring some order to these differences without denying either the usefulness of this variety or the importance of the differences among perspectives. This new book illuminates these differences by collecting a select sample of theory and research into one of two major sections. The first section includes work undertaken from a social interactive perspective. The overarching aim is to identify processes of child-child or child-adult interactions as they emerge over relatively short periods of time. Typically the methodology involves the microanalysis of videotaped interactions. Development is situated literally within social interactions which are considered directly responsible for children's development. The second section provides a sample of work representing a symbolic action perspective This one is not oriented toward social interactions but toward the symbolic meanings that they express and that children impose on them The dominant methodology is interpretive or hermeneutic and the goal is to articulate the figurative metaphoric processes and narrative structures that inhabit social actions and from which they draw their meaning and coherence
