Food Security and Global Environmental Change John Ingram, Polly Ericksen, Diana Liverman, 2012-07-26 Global environmental change GEC represents an immediate and unprecedented threat to the food security of hundreds of millions of people especially those who depend on small scale agriculture for their livelihoods As this book shows at the same time agriculture and related activities also contribute to GEC by for example intensifying greenhouse gas emissions and altering the land surface Responses aimed at adapting to GEC may have negative consequences for food security just as measures taken to increase food security may exacerbate GEC The authors show that this complex and dynamic relationship between GEC and food security is also influenced by additional factors food systems are heavily influenced by socioeconomic conditions which in turn are affected by multiple processes such as macro level economic policies political conflicts and other important drivers The book provides a major accessible synthesis of the current state of knowledge and thinking on the relationships between GEC and food security Most other books addressing the subject concentrate on the links between climate change and agricultural production and do not extend to an analysis of the wider food system which underpins food security this book addresses the broader issues based on a novel food system concept and stressing the need for actions at a regional rather than just an international or local level It reviews new thinking which has emerged over the last decade analyses research methods for stakeholder engagement and for undertaking studies at the regional level and looks forward by reviewing a number of emerging hot topics in the food security GEC debate which help set new agendas for the research community at large Published with Earth System Science Partnership GECAFS and SCOPE

Reframing Climate Change Shannon O'Lear, Simon Dalby, 2015-07-24 Change the system not the climate is a common slogan of climate change activists Yet when this idea comes into the academic and policy realm it is easy to see how climate change discourse frequently asks the wrong questions Reframing Climate Change encourages social scientists policy makers and graduate students to critically consider how climate change is framed in scientific social and political spheres It proposes ecological geopolitics as a framework for understanding the extent to which climate change is a meaningful analytical focus as well as the ways in which it can be detrimental detracting attention from more productive lines of thought research and action The volume draws from multiple perspectives and disciplines to cover a broad scope of climate change Chapter topics range from climate science and security to climate justice and literacy Although these familiar concepts are widely used by scholars and policy makers they are discussed here as frequently problematic when used as lenses through which to study climate change Beyond merely reviewing current trends within these different approaches to climate change the collection offers a thoughtful assessment of these approaches with an eye towards an overarching reconsideration of the current understanding of our relationship to climate change Reframing Climate Change is an essential resource for students policy makers and anyone interested in understanding more about this important topic Who decides what the priorities are Who benefits from these priorities and what kinds of systems or actions are justified or hindered The key contribution of the book is the outlining of ecological geopolitics as a different way of understanding human environment relationships including and beyond climate change issues
