

- The goal of philosophy is to get us to answer these questions for ourselves – to make up our own minds about our self, life, knowledge, art, religion and morality.
- Philosophy examines these beliefs. The aim is not to reject them but learn why we hold them and to examine whether there are good reasons to continue holding them

Friedrich Paulsen, Frank Thilly

The Goal Of Philosophy:

The Philosophical Review Jacob Gould Schurman, James Edwin Creighton, Frank Thilly, Gustavus Watts Cunningham, 1909 An international journal of general philosophy Metaphilosophy and Free Will Richard Double, 1996 Double looks at the contending schools of thought on the problem of free will arguing that the free will problem is intractable because free will theorists are separated by metaphilosophical differences in the way they view the philosophical enterprise

Rousseau as Author Christopher Kelly, 2003-02-15 For Rousseau consecrating one's life to the truth his personal credo meant publicly taking responsibility for what one publishes and only publishing what would be of public benefit Christopher Kelly argues that this commitment is central to understanding the relationship between Rousseau's writings and his political philosophy Unlike many other writers of his day Rousseau refused to publish anonymously even though he risked persecution for his writings But Rousseau felt that authors must be self-restrained as well as bold and must carefully consider the potential political effects of what they might publish sometimes seeking the good conflicts with writing the truth Kelly shows how this understanding of public authorship played a crucial role in Rousseau's conception and practice of citizenship and political action Rousseau as Author will be a groundbreaking book not just for Rousseau scholars but for anyone studying Enlightenment ideas about authorship and responsibility Systematic Theology Augustus Hopkins Strong, 1907

Wellesley Magazine, 1911 Introduction to Philosophy Friedrich Paulsen, Frank Thilly, 1896 Science in the Context of Application Martin Carrier, Alfred Nordmann, 2010-11-12 We increasingly view the world around us as a product of science and technology Accordingly we have begun to appreciate that science does not take its problems only from nature and then produces technological applications but that the very problems of scientific research themselves are generated by science and technology Simultaneously problems like global warming the toxicology of nanoparticles or the use of renewable energies are constituted by many factors that interact with great complexity Science in the context of application is challenged to gain new understanding and control of such complexity it cannot seek shelter in the ivory tower or simply pursue its internal quest for understanding and gradual improvement of grand theories Science in the Context of Application will identify explore and assess these changes Part I considers the Changing Conditions of Scientific Research and part II Science Values and Society Examples are drawn from pharmaceutical research the information sciences simulation modelling nanotechnology cancer research the effects of commercialization and many other fields The book assembles papers from well known European and American Science Studies scholars like Bernadette Bensaude Vincent Janet Kourany Michael Mahoney Margaret Morrison Hans Jörg Rheinberger Arie Rip Dan Sarewitz Peter Weingart and others The individual chapters are written to address anyone who is concerned about the role of contemporary science in society including scientists philosophers and policy makers The Architectonic of Reason Lea Ypi, 2021 This book focuses on a question issued from The Architectonic of Pure Reason one of the most important sections of Kant's first Critique what is the human being It suggests that the answer to this question is tied to a particular account of the unity of reason one that stresses its purposive character
