Samuel, 2025-07-28 This work whose target audience includes both historians and practitioners is a socioeconomic history of American consumers The author shows how over the past century Americans personal and national identities became heavily defined by how they spent money in the marketplace. The American consumer is presented as a character on the national stage whose role changed significantly over time based on varying social economic and political conditions. What did not change over the course of five different eras however was a continual transformation of Americans from citizens to consumers as the private sphere steadily eclipsed the public or civic arena. The principal argument of the work is that alongside critics justifiable claims that American style consumption is ultimately unsustainable, consumer culture has consistently served as a principal source of meaning and purpose in people's lives. Key insights into the American idea and experience are revealed by charting the trajectory of consumers.

Rubin, 1971 Industrial Ecology and Spaces of Innovation K. Green, 2006-01-01 This is an especially timely book. Carefully organized and well motivated, its power lies in the explicit effort to ask how industrial ecology and innovation studies do can and should intersect. Reid Lifset, Yale School of Forestry and Environmental Studies and editor, Journal of Industrial Ecology. This book explores the disciplinary interfaces and practical implications of working across the two disciplines of industrial ecology (IE) and innovation studies (IS). Both disciplines have something to say about instigating environmental improvement and more sustainable futures. IE is predicated on the idea that social and economic systems mirror or should be made to mirror natural ecological systems. Proponents of IE devise models and techniques to trace material and energy resource flows as they move through social and economic systems. They propose policy and management improvements to increase the resource efficiency of such systems. By contrast, IS researchers work with the idea that innovation is a dynamic activity vital to social and economic change and is shaped by a range of actors in industry, in government and in households. The authors illustrate the conceptual and practical problems and opportunities of working across this bi-disciplinary interface with case studies presented from each and from hybrid perspectives that draw on both. These include applied examples from IE such as an evaluation of industrial symbiosis in the UK and from working projects in industrialising countries. Cases that originate with IS cover the areas of food construction and waste incineration. New directions for conceptual development and further research are also offered. Conceptual blindspots and research gaps are identified at the interface of the two disciplines. Industrial Ecology and Spaces of Innovation will appeal to a wide and interdisciplinary audience including academics and researchers of environmental innovation management and economics.

industrial ecology and schools of environmental engineering Business environmental practitioners consultants and managers working with techniques such as life cycle analysis environmental impact assessment and collaborative industrial symbiosis initiatives will also find much to engage them within this book
