various technological practices have been blamed for the present situation in many countries. Most observers agree that human beings have been both perpetrators and victims of desertification. Anthropologists have long been interested in documenting how different societies have affected and been affected by their environments. The papers in this volume present case studies of societies ranging from ancient Peru to contemporary Israel along with several topically oriented works. All are designed to illustrate how various societies, whether by water management or by the exploitation of plants and animals, have attempted to achieve ecological balance. Social organization and ideology as well as technology are discussed as important variables affecting the ways in which populations adapt to or cope with desertification. Contributions Gray Herbarium, 1984 Rare Plants of Texas Jackie M.
