The Gifted And Talented Impacts:

The Impacts of Gifted and Talented Education Rachana R. Bhatt, 2009 This paper estimates the impact of gifted and talented program participation on academic achievement and peer composition for a sample of 8th grade students Gifted education provides children that have been identified as having high ability in some intellectual respect with a supplemental curriculum to their traditional school course work Participation in gifted programs is not random so OLS estimates are biased by the presence of unobserved heterogeneity which is correlated with participation status as well as outcomes To obtain causal estimates I use an instrumental variables approach where the instrument is a self constructed measure of how well each child fulfills the criteria his/her school uses to admit students into the gifted program relative to the child's peers The IV estimates indicate that in the short run participation is associated with a significant increase in math standardized test score performance In the long run participation is found to increase the probability a child takes Advanced Placement classes

There is no evidence that participation influences the composition of a child's peer group
