library Envisioning Media Power Brett Christophers, 2009-04-16 Envisioning Media Power develops an original geographical perspective on the nature and exercise of power in the international television economy It uses theories of political economy as the basis for a comparative empirical examination of the UK and New Zealand television markets while closely considering these markets respective relationships with the US market and its globally influential media corporations In fleshing out this geographical perspective the book critically addresses the power to produce reproduce and extract profit from territorialized media markets To understand such powers the book examines processes of creation and dissemination of industry knowledge structures of industry governance and the locational characteristics of television s operational economy Through its rigorous and creative combination of conceptual insights with empirical substance Envisioning Media Power both illuminates the fabric of television s international space economy and ultimately offers a unique theoretic argument suggesting that power knowledge and geography are inseparable not only from one another but from the process of accumulation of media capital Ecological Awareness Sigurd Bergmann, Heather Eaton, 2011 The past years have seen an ecological development in religions that is staggering These efforts are responses to difficult local and global ecological problems with an increased awareness that religions need to be alert engaged and active partners in the work for a sustainable future Ecological Awareness with 17 authors from theology religious studies biology sociology and philosophy explores how religious practitioners have become increasingly aware of ecological challenges The book considers aspects of ecological awareness personal social political religious and ecological It sheds new light on an essential function of belief systems which function not only as cognitive and moral systems but emerge from and affect our human body and its mode of perceiving our milieu and ourselves within it The book contributes to an increasing awareness of our embeddedness in larger life processes as well as the awareness of life as a gift The Political Ecology of Climate Change Adaptation Marcus Taylor, 2014-11-17 This book provides the first systematic critique of the concept of climate change adaptation within the field of international development Drawing on a reworked political ecology framework it argues that climate is not something out there that we adapt to Instead it is part of the social and biophysical forces through which our lived environments are actively yet unevenly produced From this original foundation the book challenges us to rethink the concepts of climate change vulnerability resilience and adaptive capacity in transformed ways With case studies drawn from Pakistan India and Mongolia it demonstrates concretely how climatic change emerges as a dynamic force in the ongoing transformation of contested rural landscapes In crafting this synthesis the book recalibrates the frameworks we use to envisage climatic change in the context of contemporary debates over development livelihoods and poverty With its unique theoretical contribution and case study material this book will appeal to researchers and students in environmental studies sociology geography politics and development studies Cartographies of Nature Maano Ramutsindela, 2014-06-19 The ascendancy of border studies in the last two decades or so and the burgeoning work on nature and society neither drew attention to ecological theories of borders nor capitalised on nature as a useful avenue through which border research could be advanced. This volume fills this void by engaging with the following key questions: What insights can be drawn from species borders to broaden understandings of bordering? What sorts of borders are engendered by various types of conservation areas? What border stories does each of these areas tell us? What do conservation related borders teach us about multiple lines that divide societies? Answers to these questions help researchers understand a typology of nature related borders. The primary objectives of this volume are twofold. The first objective is to expand and deepen the links between nature conservation and border studies by bringing species borders into conversation with border studies while at the same time paying attention to diverse conservation areas and conservation practices. The second objective is to highlight forms of borders associated with various types of conservation areas and the protection of certain types of natural resources. The manner in which nature conservation produces borders and the forms those borders take has the potential to enrich the conceptualisation of borders. The point of departure in this volume is that conservation practices produce feedback loops on social reality. Authors in the volume variously show that concerns with environmental protection and management offer possibilities for exploring and even disrupting borders within society and those between society and nature. Conservation areas in particular are crucial for a meaningful analysis of nature's borders and the discourses and narratives related to them and how such discourses influence conservation practice. This volume is an invaluable resource for research and upper level courses on border studies, political ecology, conservation and biodiversity management and environmental change and social impact.
