Social Death Lisa Marie Cacho, 2012-11-12 Winner of the 2013 John Hope Franklin Book Prize presented by the American Studies Association A necessary read that demonstrates the ways in which certain people are devalued without attention to social contexts Social Death tackles one of the core paradoxes of social justice struggles and scholarship that the battle to end oppression shares the moral grammar that structures exploitation and sanctions state violence Lisa Marie Cacho forcefully argues that the demands for personhood for those who in the eyes of society have little value depend on capitalist and heteropatriarchal measures of worth With poignant case studies Cacho illustrates that our very understanding of personhood is premised upon the unchallenged devaluation of criminalized populations of color Hence the reliance of rights based politics on notions of who is and is not a deserving member of society inadvertently replicates the logic that creates and normalizes states of social and literal death Her understanding of inalienable rights and personhood provides us the much needed comparative analytical and ethical tools to understand the racialized and nationalized tensions between racial groups Driven by a radical relentless critique Social Death challenges us to imagine a heretofore unthinkable politics and ethics that do not rest on neoliberal arguments about worth but rather emerge from the insurgent experiences of those negated persons who do not live by the norms that determine the productive patriotic law abiding and family oriented subject

Governing Death and Loss Stephen Conway, 2011 Political economic social cultural and technological changes have led to profound transformations in the ways that death and loss are perceived and managed in contemporary society Over the last few decades the long term shift to chronic illness as a major causal factor has significantly increased the time scale of dying Most people die in institutions and care is typically medical Many communities and ordinary citizens now relinquish control and involvement to experts in the last stages of life However at global and local levels new institutional arrangements are emerging to govern the changing face of death and a new model is being developed to counter claims of the creeping medicalisation of death and dying Emphasising the international context of

Write to Death Elizabeth A. Gailey, 2003-09-30 Has the mainstream media been careless in reporting on the issue of euthanasia As the Right to Die and Physician Assisted Suicide movements gather steam the national media have been too quick to perpetuate and focus on the medical and legal overtones of death The ethical religious and philosophical dimensions of our increased acceptance of euthanizing the aged infirm and disabled are often neglected Gailey argues that the press s failure to enrich public discourse may well erode its trustworthiness in the public s eye Using abundant examples from analysis of elite mainstream news publications Gailey details how the national press systematically advanced pro euthanasia views and interpretations while marginalizing or omitting pro life perspectives and frames The battle over legalizing passive and active euthanasia has enormous social economic and ethical implications An understanding of how the news media frame or package such issues for public consumption is critical Gailey s integrative approach combines an exploration of the major historical ideational and economic factors leading to the rise of the Right to Die movement and includes in depth analysis of the media s framing of the controversy in the two decades Karen Ann Quinlan s coma in 1975 to Dr Jack Kevorkian s 1999 conviction

Imagining the American Death Penalty Birte Christ, 2025-04-29 Imagining the American Death Penalty traces the US American cultural imaginary of capital punishment through popular visual representations from the 1890s to the twenty first century The book focuses on three generic and historical clusters of representations early film from the 1890s through Intolerance 1916 crime film noir of the 1950s and 1960s and legal TV series from the 1990s through the early 2000s The book makes two central arguments First it demonstrates that an increased concern with the death penalty in popular media does not mean that these texts promote an abolitionist agenda their cultural work is ambiguous at best This ambiguity is always contingent upon both the affordances of the particular genre and medium in question and on political legal discursive context The book explores both in detail Early film is enchanted with its own representational possibilities due to the progress of technology and in analogy with the progress in execution technique specifically the electric chair In film noir genre conventions and the legal back and forth before and after Furman predicate ambiguity In legal TV series the genre s ensemble casts and its focus on conversational exchange invite open debate The second argument is that popular visual representations consistently whitewash the death penalty The book demonstrates that this is the case because the most common narrative around executions in film and TV is to cast the condemned man as a hero who defies the violence of the state gains dignity by accepting his fate and faults and in some ways triumphs over death The American imaginary until very recently did or could not imagine Black men to possess that measure of agency that it attributed to its white heroes
