Flannery,2009-10-11 At the end of the nineteenth century Pittsburgh was leading the nation in glass production and glass bottle plants in particular relied heavily on adolescent and younger males for their manufacturing process These glass house boys worked both day and night as plants ran around the clock to meet production demands and remain price competitive with their newly automated rivals Boys performed menial tasks received low wages and had little to say on their own behalf By the turn of the century most states had enacted laws banning children from working at night and coupled with compulsory education requirements had greatly reduced the use of children in industry In western Pennsylvania however child labor was deeply entrenched and Pennsylvania lawmakers lagged far behind the rest of the nation In The Glass House Boys of Pittsburgh James L Flannery presents an original and compelling examination of legislative clashes over the singular issue of the glass house boys He reveals the many societal economic and political factors at work that allowed for the perpetuation of child labor in this industry and region Through extensive research in Pennsylvania state legislature archives National Child Labor Committee reports and union and industry journals Flannery uncovers a complex web of collusion between union representatives industrialists and legislators that kept child labor reform at bay Despite national pressure a concerted effort by reformers and changes to education laws the slow defeat of the glass house exception in 1915 came about primarily because of technological advances in the glass bottle industry that limited the need for child labor Dream House Adele Tutter,2016 Famous for its transparency the Philip Johnson Glass House the icon of modernism that Vincent Scully called the most conceptually important house of the century has nonetheless proven vexingly opaque to interpretation Its architect Philip Cortelyou Johnson has been equally elusive a polarizing and influential cultural figure on whom no psychological character study yet exists In her new book Adele Tutter addresses both enigmas Dream House An Intimate Portrait of the Philip Johnson Glass House reveals how this superficially nonrepresentational physical structure encodes aspects of its architect s aspirations motivations and conflicts how it acts as a veritable self portrait of his inner world An envious vulnerable man emerges from this intimate synthesis Fearing he lacked talent or genius and possessing a character prone to fragmentation Johnson perpetually searched for a dominating mentor or style to bolster his sense of self and help organize his chaotic inner world while concealing the forbidden sense of greatness with which he justified his desire for power and influence Tutter s analysis reconciles the contradictory forces in a man who was both a one time advocate of Hitler and a humanist homosexual a dogmatic modernist and an errant postmodernist Through its rigorous radical reappraisal of the Glass House this book paints a fresh and psychologically revealing portrait of the man who built it Two-way Mirror Power Dan Graham,1999 Essays charting the diverse works of renowned conceptual artist Dan Graham The Answer of the Proprietors of the Bear-Garden Glass-House to the Case of Mr. J.G. and Partners, Proprietors of the Glass-House Over Against Hungerford-Market John GUMLEY (Proprietor of the Glass-House over against Hungerford Market.),1707 The Glass House Florence Morse Kingsley,1909 Glass-House, Essex-Street.
