Herbert Guillaume,1894 The agricultural sector as an alternative to illegal mining in Peru Piñeiro,

Valeria,Thomas, Jenny,Elverdin, Pablo,2016-12-09 Gold mining is the main economic activity in Madre de Dios Peru Despite efforts the state has not yet managed to identify a formalization process achievable for small operators In addition many small scale miners are driven by poverty and need income to provide for their basic needs Because participation in small scale mining is largely driven by poverty it is likely that in the longer term much artisanal mining activity will disappear naturally if through economic development more attractive work options become available This paper reviews the importance of illegal mining in Madre de Dios and the potential for development of the agriculture sector It also analyzes three different policy scenarios 1 government spending to rectify the environmental damage in the region caused by illegal mining 2 development of the agricultural sector in the region and 3 a final scenario with both environmental restoration and agricultural development Results show that additional government spending in Madre de Dios does not significantly affect the rest of the country and that investment in agriculture can achieve structural change in the gross domestic product of Madre de Dios Development of the agricultural sector also slightly increases household incomes in Madre de Dios Peru Mr.Gonzalo C. Pastor,2012-06-01 This paper reviews monetary and exchange rate policies in Peru in 1930 80 The review covers major transformations to the world economy including the post 1929 crash and WWII and changing economic paradigms such as the collapse of the gold standard and the rise and fall of the Bretton Woods system of fixed exchange rates The analysis emphasizes the lasting partnership between Peruvian policymakers and the Bretton Woods institutions while stressing the local authorities ownership of final policy decisions The review shows that in general during the fifty year period under analysis the Peruvian authorities sought to deliver nominal exchange rate stability even at the cost of introducing market distortions and or incurring heavy losses in international reserves Peru Charles Reginald Enock,1910
