conversations and inner thoughts as they attempt to grasp the sensory reality around them I no longer have any interest in living under the conditions that this era allows writes the Captain of L Indien a ship whose radio remains packed in a crate in the hold The men aboard won t be needing it they have no interest in connecting with the world of ordinary men With enough provisions to last them five years they set sail in July of 1940 for the South Seas leaving civilization behind in search of the unknown Hastening onwards Giono s men steer deeper into themselves seeking a purpose beyond the world in upheaval they left behind a moving and spiritual work written by one of Europe s most ardent 20th century pacifists A sensational novel that delves into the unknown reaches of the sea and soul perfect for readers seeking a poetic escape that challenges the political and social status quo Jean Giono's Hidden Reality Edward Bruce Ford,2004 This volume demonstrates that throughout his career Jean Giono believed that true reality was hidden behind appearances Re-Embroidering the Robe Suzanne Bray,Adrienne E. Gavin,Peter Merchant,2009-10-02 Religious faith myths and legends have always been present in literature However their role has changed over time Since the middle of the nineteenth century with the diminishing role of religion in European society writers with some kind of belief system whether religious or political have tended to use myth in two different ways They have either retold the old familiar myths of the past so that they carry fresh messages relevant to a contemporary audience or created their own new myths as modern vehicles of traditional truths Many writers have combined the two techniques Such is the transforming artistry which the eighteen essays in Re Embroidering the Robe examine the remaking or new minting of myth in literature from 1850 to the present day so that what it embodies and expresses speaks powerfully to the modern reader In widely differing ways therefore all of the texts analysed here compel attention
