The Gold Under The Water A Wildlife Conservation Reader:

The Gold Under the Water Anson Banda,2000 A piece of creative writing centring on the life of a family and a young girl Beatrice living in a small village called Kalinde on the shores of Lake Sabala in Zambia The lake was famous for its abundance of fish and the livelihood of the community depended on it But recently the lake had not been giving the people of the village as many fish as it had before it was becoming polluted and subject to illegal activities The story explores what happens to the family as their natural environment deteriorates The environmental morals of the story provide clues to the education and knowledge that will be necessary for young and old alike if its preservation of this environment is to be achieved sociological perspective Using qualitative methods the study explicates various social components of a collaboration of stakeholders working together to protect the species from extinction Rediscovered in 1998 after being presumed extinct for nearly a century the IMB persists exclusively among the San Juan Islands WA where the efforts of scientists local conservationists government employees and non profit organizations have sustained the species even achieving a listing under the Endangered Species Act For these reasons and many others the IMB presents a case in some ways fascinating for its idiosyncrasies and in other ways indicative of broader trends in conservation work in an era of rapid global biodiversity loss From the study emerges a call for increased sociological research that contributes knowledge beneficial to conservation practice or what the book calls conservation sociology The book reviews existing literature in this space and provides a framework for constructing research theory and application in conservation sociology As the social components of IMB conservation are explored so too are components of conservation sociology The book describes competing norms and beliefs among IMB stakeholders demonstrating the capacity of conservation sociology to describe and interpret social phenomena in conservation work explores power dynamics in the collaboration using sociological theory to interpret significant events in IMB conservation and analyzes the significance of time in IMB conservation while providing suggestions for applied conservation work based in sociological perspectives The book accomplishes three main goals First it provides an account of details and events in Island Marble Butterfly conservation Second it defines positions and develops conservation sociology Third it demonstrates original research in conservation sociology resulting in a deep look at the complexities of the social components of species conservation

Endangered Species Edward P. Weber,2016-03-21 This book uses primary documents as a lens through which to examine historical and present day efforts to protect endangered species in the United States and around the world In this thought provoking work author Edward P Weber examines the values policies challenges and approaches to endangered species conservation over the past 200 years Using primary source documents and in depth analysis of the issues the reference tracks the evolution of species protection and conservation in the United States and offers a brief look at global programs in the United States and other parts of the world The book surveys how different countries are faring in protecting their plant and animal life and considers which guidelines and programs hold the most promise for success in the future Chapters compare and contrast past and present attitudes regarding endangered species and extinction and identify the influence of major organizations and individuals central to the debate over endangered species Judiciously selected primary documents also explore the impact of species endangerment and loss on natural ecosystems and ultimately on humankind itself The Coloniality of Animal

Monstrous Othering in Children's Books, Films, and Toys Donna Varga, 2024-08-19 The Coloniality of Animal Monstrous Othering in Children's Books Films and Toys examines how the portrayal of animals as physically distorted behaviorally depraved and intellectually defective serves to justify their debasement violation and destruction in materials directed toward young consumers The author argues that this animal monstrous Othering arises from the Eurocentric belief in humans natural superiority over animals and the right to categorize animals in accordance with a scale of worthiness that parallels the subjugation of racialized persons The chapters examine a variety of canonical figures like the dissolute wolf of Red Riding Hood stories and the disfigured titular character of the Wonky Donkey picture book alongside non canonical animals including reprobate pigs degenerate sharks self centered flamingos and wicked piranhas To counter this animal debasement Varga juxtaposes these readings with an examination of materials that articulate harmonious animal human interrelationships without dependence on styles of anthropomorphism that diminish animality The World Book
