Doctors and the State David Wilsford, 1991 All advanced health care systems face severe difficulties in financing the delivery of today's sophisticated medical care In this study David Wilsford compares the health systems in France and the United States to demonstrate that some political systems are considerably more effective at controlling the cost of care than others He argues that two variables the autonomy of the state and the strength and cohesiveness of organized medicine explain this variance In France Wilsford shows the state is strong in the health policy domain while organized medicine is weak and divided Consequently physicians exercise little influence over health care policymaking By contrast in the United States the state is weak the employers and insurers who pay for health care are fragmented and organized medicine is strong and well financed As a result medical professionals are able to exert a greater influence on policymaking thus making cost control more difficult Wilsford extends his comparison to health care systems in the United Kingdom West Germany Italy Canada and Japan Whether the private or public sector finances health care he discovers there is now an important trend in all of the advanced industrial countries toward controlling escalating costs by curbing both the medical profession s clinical autonomy and physicians incomes

The Light-Green Society Michael Bess,2003-11-15 The accelerating interpenetration of nature and culture is the hallmark of the new light green social order that has emerged in postwar France argues Michael Bess in this penetrating new history On one hand a preoccupation with natural qualities and equilibrium has increasingly infused France s economic and cultural life On the other human activities have laid an ever more potent and pervasive touch on the environment whether through the intrusion of agriculture industry and urban growth or through the much subtler and more well intentioned efforts of ecological management The Light Green Society limns sharply these trends over the last fifty years The rise of environmentalism in the 1960s stemmed from a fervent desire to save wild nature nature conceived as a qualitatively distinct domain wholly separate from human designs and endeavors And yet Bess shows after forty years of environmentalist agitation much of it remarkably successful in achieving its aims the old conception of nature as a separate sphere has become largely untenable In the light green society where ecology and technological modernity continually flow together a new hybrid vision of intermingled nature culture has increasingly taken its place

Boom - Crisis - Heritage Lars Bluma,Michael Farrenkopf,Torsten Meyer,2021-10-11 Boom Crisis Heritage these terms aptly outline the history of global coal mining after 1945 The essays collected in this volume explore this history with different emphases and questions The range of topics also reflects this broad approach The first section contains contributions on political social and economic history They address the European energy system in the globalised world of the 20th and 21st centuries as well as specific social policies in mining regions The second section then focuses on the medialisation of mining and its legacies also paying attention to the environmental history of mining The anthology which goes back to a conference of the same name at the Deutsches Bergbau Museum Bochum thus offers a multi faceted insight into the research field of modern mining history
