

Taxation

- The politics of taxation drove decisions from the 1700's and up in the brewing industry regarding raw materials and the type of beer. For example, the development of darker ales such as porters and stouts in the UK in the 1700's was undertaken in part because the government taxed the brewer on what type of malt used.
- Essentially porters and stouts were born because the darker malts were taxed less than other malts.
