Petaluma Katherine J. Rinehart, 2005 Petaluma's past is uniquely reflected in its historic architecture. The town's earliest commercial buildings tightly lined the waterfront of the Petaluma River at one time the busiest transportation corridor in the North Bay. After the railroad arrived an already thriving dairy and manufacturing city became the nation's largest poultry and egg producer. A vital economy brought factories like the impressive Sunset Line Twine plant, hatcheries, vast warehouses and grain elevators that have become defining Petaluma landmarks. Its handsome downtown listed on the National Register of Historic Places is noted for its Italianate cast-iron front commercial buildings and a variety of pre-World War II residential styles surround it in charming neighborhoods. A favorite of moviemakers, its classic main streets played a central role in the film American Graffiti. Comprehensive Calendar of Bicentennial Events, 1975 New York Times Saturday Book Review Supplement, 1968 The Golden Rule, 1848 The New York Times Saturday Review of Books and Art, 1968 Dwell, 2001-06 At Dwell we're staging a minor revolution. We think that it's possible to live in a house or apartment by a bold modern architect to own furniture and products that are exceptionally well designed and still be a regular human being. We think that good design is an integral part of real life. And that real life has been conspicuous by its absence in most design and architecture magazines.
