Teaching Public Health Writing Jennifer Beard, 2022 Everyone working in or teaching public health has their origin story Ask your colleagues how they ended up where they are and you will rarely hear the same story twice Of course there are variations on some key themes

Dramatizing Writing Virginia Skinner-Linnenberg, 2020-07-24 Although speech departments have owned delivery for the last 100 years those who teach writing especially English departments can gain a great deal by reinstating delivery into their conceptions of and theories about writing Thus in the author's vision of dramatizing writing in the composition classroom delivery can have an impact on all the composing steps from invention to final draft The goals of this text are to redefine delivery for writing to reunite it with other parts of the classical rhetorical canon and to practically apply it in contemporary writing instruction This text is divided into three main sections The first provides a survey of the history of delivery in rhetorical theory A continuum is set up from a totally physical conception of delivery to a noetic one which incorporates more intellectual processes The argument is that the tension heightened by discord over its definition eventually led to the splitting of delivery from the rhetorical canon A separate discussion of the women's challenge to delivery is also included The next section contains a survey of facets of delivery that exist in current theory combined with the author's own theory of delivery It provides insight into the state of delivery in contemporary writing instruction The author argues that since the split of delivery from the rhetorical canon has caused a modern bias against delivery in writing theory many strategies that could aid in the teaching of writing have either been overlooked or undertheorized Therefore she borrows from current theoretical areas within and outside of writing in order to construct her own theory of delivery The last section provides practical applications of delivery in writing instruction Again borrowing from many sources inside and outside of composition she describes the techniques teachers may use to incorporate delivery in a writing classroom Through the use of delivery more strategies may be developed to aid in the teaching of writing Special features include the incorporation of some practices that had been in use in the composition classroom for many years but did not have any consciously theoretical grounding the discussion of women rhetoricians theories on delivery the combination of many contemporary theoretical areas including theatrical feminist rhetorical and pedagogical to form the author's redefined theory of delivery and the presentation of practical applications of this new theory of delivery for teachers to utilize in their own classrooms

EBOOK: Developing Writers: Teaching and Learning in the Digital Age Richard Andrews, Anna Smith, 2011-07-16 This book takes a fresh look at what it means to learn and develop as a writer in response to concerns on both sides of the Atlantic and elsewhere in the world about standards in writing In this book the authors seek answers to some perennial questions Why does performance in writing tend to lag behind that in reading Are the productive skills of speaking and writing more difficult because they require the learner to make something new What does it mean to develop as a writer This book provides the foundation for developing the teaching of writing It does so by Reviewing and comparing models of writing pedagogy from the last fifty years Discussing the notion of development in depth Developing a new theory and model for writing in the multimodal and digital age Its basic premise is that writing needs to be re conceived as one crucial component of communication among other modes Andrews and Smith argue that although existing theories have provided insights into the teaching and learning of writing we need to bring such theories up to date in the digital and multimodal age Developing Writers is designed for teachers academics researchers curriculum designers parents and others who are interested in writing development It will also be intended for anyone who is interested in developing their own writing and who wishes to understand the principles on which such development is based Continue the conversation at www.developingwriters.org

Contemporary Composition Studies Edith Babin, Kimberly Harrison, 1999-12-30 Composition studies is a rapidly growing and constantly changing field At present however graduate students new to the field and writing teachers who want to make new connections between theory and practice have little choice of current reference works that define key terms in composition studies and provide information about the scholars and researchers who have shaped and are shaping the discipline This book supplies this information in an easily accessible format and places both scholars and terms in the context of the field s development Included are alphabetically arranged entries for 108 individuals who have developed the field and 128 terms central to the discipline The first part of the book provides entries for leaders in composition studies Each entry identifies the areas in which the scholar has contributed most influentially to the field and provides both a chronological overview of the person s contributions and a bibliography of representative works The second part includes entries for terms that are problematic both for newcomers and for those already familiar with the discipline The entries for the terms show how the disciplinary context has shaped the ways in which they have been used The entries also indicate how established thinkers in composition studies and other disciplines have explained or defined the terms provide examples of the terms in context and list scholars often associated with them An appendix includes entries for scholars from other disciplines who have contributed to the field

Experimental Writing in Composition Patricia Suzanne Sullivan, 2012-12-15 From the outset experimental writing has been viewed as a means to afford a more creative space for students to express individuality underrepresented social realities and criticisms of dominant socio political discourses and their institutions Yet the recent trend toward multimedia texts has left many composition instructors with little basis from which to assess these new forms and to formulate pedagogies In this original study Patricia Suzanne Sullivan provides a critical history of experimental writing theory and its aesthetic foundations and demonstrates their application to current multimodal writing Sullivan unpacks the work of major scholars in composition and rhetoric and their theories on aesthetics particularly avant gardism She also relates the dialectics that shape these aesthetics and sheds new light on both the positive and negative aspects of experimental writing and its attempts to redefine the writing disciplines Additionally she shows how current debates over the value of multimedia texts echo earlier arguments that pitted experimental writing against traditional models Sullivan further articulates the ways that multimedia is and isn't changing composition pedagogies and provides insights into resolving these tensions reader to see personal writing as the metaphorical space where individuals negotiate meaning with others and the world Drawing upon writing process theory curriculum theory narrative theory and many years of practice this book explores writing in relation to the self but dares to include the multiplicities and contradictions of social and cultural constructions of gender power and politics Park uses the metaphor of the riparian zone to reconsider the value of writing as a site of negotiation of self culture and society This book is the best of curriculum theory and narrative inquiry as well as a stunning invitation to those working in language arts writing and teacher education to reconsider personal writing as a place of great diversity beauty and paradox Composition In The University Sharon Crowley, 1998-05-15 Composition in the University examines the required introductory course in composition within American colleges and universities According to Sharon Crowley the required composition course has never been conceived in the way that other introductory courses have been as an introduction to the principles and practices of a field of study Rather it has been constructed throughout much of its history as a site from which larger educational and ideological agendas could be advanced and such agendas have not always served the interests of students or teachers even though they are usually touted as programs of study that students need. If there is a master narrative of the history of composition it is told in the institutional attitude that has governed administration, design, and staffing of the course from its beginnings: the attitude that the universal requirement is in place in order to construct docile academic subjects. Crowley argues that due to its association with literary studies in English departments, composition instruction has been inappropriately influenced by humanist pedagogy and that modern humanism is not a satisfactory rationale for the study of writing. She examines historical attempts to reconfigure the required course in nonhumanist terms such as the advent of communications studies during the 1940s. Crowley devotes two essays to this phenomenon, concentrating on the furor caused by the adoption of a communications program at the University of Iowa. Composition in the University concludes with a pair of essays that argue against maintenance of the universal requirement. In the last of these, Crowley envisions possible nonhumanist rationales that could be developed for vertical curricula in writing instruction were the universal requirement not in place. Crowley presents her findings in a series of essays because she feels the history of the required composition course cannot easily be understood as a coherent narrative since understandings of the purpose of the required course have altered rapidly from decade to decade, sometimes in shockingly sudden and erratic fashion. The essays in this book are informed by Crowley's long career of teaching composition, administering a composition program, and training teachers of the required introductory course. The book also draws on experience she gained while working with committees formed by the Conference on College Composition and Communication toward implementation of the Wyoming Resolution, an attempt to better the working conditions of post-secondary teachers of writing.
