Lumbering Songs from the Northern Woods Edith Fowke, 1970 Death and danger are dominant themes in the shantyboy's repertoire as they were prevailing realities in his life The ballad of Jimmy Whelan one of many tragic heroes who went to a watery grave ends with the warning to take care For death is drawing nearer and trying to destroy the pride of some poor mother's heart and his father's only joy If constant occupational hazards are not enough to sour one's outlook surely hard work for poor pay loneliness and lack of creature comforts will make a bitter person Not the shantyboy His songs may complain of hard times but more often they celebrate his pride in a job well done his strong sense of camaraderie and his good humor elements especially evident in the moniker songs which name each member of a crew and describe their job Indeed in one breath the shantyboy brands the food as such that dogs would bark at in the next he cheerfully inquires who could lead a happier life than a jovial shantyboy In Ontario and adjoining areas of Quebec the lumbercamps played a major role in preserving and spreading folk songs of all kinds for the logger sang everything from British ballads to American music hall ditties and also inspired the region's largest group of native songs The compiler's collection of sixty five songs recorded from former shantyboys is unique being the first in this field to exclude the more general songs popular in the bunkhouse By limiting her collection to only those songs that feature the shantyboy and his work she presents a vivid picture of life in the north woods before the days of mechanization This book includes many songs never before published and four ballads previously listed as of doubtful currency in oral tradition The texts and music are complemented by detailed documentation and by comments on the history and currency of the songs and on their relation to other folk songs variant texts and tunes

are also given Both published works and recordings by traditional singers are thoroughly covered in the references which cite not only sources that give the same song or similar versions but those that contain tune relatives An essay by Norman Cazden who transcribed the music and compiled the information on tune relatives discusses the analysis of traditional tunes

The Ballad Collectors of North America Scott B. Spencer,2012 Much has been written about the songs gathered in North America in the first half of the 20th century However there is scant information on those individuals responsible for gathering these songs The Ballad Collectors of North America How Gathering Folksongs Transformed Academic Thought and American Identity fills this gap documenting the efforts of those who transcribed and recorded North American folk songs Both biographical and topical this book chronicles not only the most influential of these song catchers but also examines the main schools of thought on the collection process the leading proponents of those schools and the projects that they shaped Contributors also consider the role of technology especially the phonograph in the collection efforts Chapters organized by region cover such areas as Appalachia the West and Canada while others devoted to specialized topics from the cowboy tune and occupational song to the commercialization of folk music through song collections and anthologies Ballad Collectors investigates the larger role of the ballad in the development of American identity from the national appreciation of cowboy songs in popular culture to the use of Appalachian song forms in radio broadcasts to the role of dustbowl ballads in the urban folk revival of the 1950s and 1960s Finally this collection assesses the changing role of songs and song texts in the academic fields of folklore anthropology musicology and ethnomusicology Scholars and students of American cultural and social history as well as fans of North American folk and popular music will find The Ballad Collectors of North America a fascinating story of how the American folk tradition gained

The Forgotten Songs of the Newfoundland Outports Anna Kearney Guigné, 2016-12-12 In 1951 musician Kenneth Peacock 1922 2000 secured a contract from the National Museum of Canada today the Canadian Museum of History to collect folksongs in Newfoundland As the province had recently joined Confederation the project was deemed a goodwill gesture while at the same time adding to the Museum's meager Anglophone archival collections Between 1951 and 1961 over the course of six field visits Peacock collected 766 songs and melodies from 118 singers in 38 communities later publishing two thirds of this material in a three volume collection Songs of the Newfoundland Outports 1965 As the publication consists of over 1000 pages Outports is considered to be a bible for Newfoundland singers and a valuable resource for researchers However Peacock's treatment of the material by way of tune text collations use of lines and stanzas from unpublished songs has always been somewhat controversial Additionally comparison of the field collection with Outports indicates that although Peacock acquired a range of material his personal preferences frequently guided his publishing agenda To ensure that the songs closely correspond to what the singers presented to Peacock the collection has been prepared by drawing on Peacock's original music and textual notes and his original field recordings The collection is far ranging and eclectic in that it includes British and American broadsides musical hall and vaudeville material alongside country and western songs and local compositions It also highlights the influence of popular media on the Newfoundland song tradition and contextualizes a number of locally composed songs In this sense it provides a key link between what Peacock actually recorded and the material he eventually published As several of the songs have not previously appeared in the standard Newfoundland collections The Forgotten Songs sheds new light on the extent of Peacock's collecting The collection includes 125 songs arranged under 113 titles along with extensive notes on the songs and brief biographies of the 58 singers Thanks to the Research Centre for the Study of Music Media and Place a video of the launch event held in St John's Newfoundland is available at <https://www.youtube.com>
