The People We Meet in Stories Robert McParland,2020-10-20 Novels bring us into fictional worlds where we encounter the lives struggles and dreams of characters who speak to the underlying pulse of society and social change In this book post World War II America comes alive again as literary critic Robert McParland tilts the rearview mirror to see the characters that captured the imaginations of millions of readers in the most popular and influential novels of the 1950s This literary era introduced us to Holden Caulfield Augie March Lolita and other antiheroes Together with popular culture heroes such as Perry Mason and James Bond they entertained thousands of readers while revealing the underlying currents of ambition desire and concern that were central to the American Dream Ralph Ellison s Invisible Man and James Baldwin s Go Tell It on the Mountain and Giovanni sRoom explored racial issues and matters of identity that reverberate still today The works of Jack Kerouac the Beat poets Allen Ginsberg and Gregory Corso and the clever and creative William S Burroughs and his Naked Lunch challenged conventional perspectives The People We Meet in Stories will appeal to readers discovering these works for the first time and to those whose tattered paperbacks reveal a long relationship with these key works in American literary history

The Academic Marketplace Theodore Caplow,2017-12-01 This volume is a must for anyone interested in academic problems and will produce the emotion of recognition in those concerned and the emotion of surprise in those outside the field Los Angeles Times Professors Caplow and McGee have given scholarly respectability to what many a professor has long suspected Competition in the academic marketplace is as severe as in the business world Their book might come to have the same function for the professor as Machiavelli s work had for ambitious princes Midwest Journal of Political Science The Academic Marketplace is a straightforward hard hitting exposé of the American university Caplow and McGee consider all the working parts of the system and assess their suitability to the professed purpose Their report on the actualities myths and consequences of routines thus amounts to an anatomy of an institution an anatomy that does not present a pretty picture We learn for example that the chief criteria used in making appointments are prestige and compatibility not teaching ability The authors describe the precipitous decline in teaching loads and then explain how this tendency is related to the new seller s market on the one hand and to the extravagantly indeterminate structure of the university as an institution on the other Not only is the temper judicious the facts well gathered and competently marshaled

but the expression of results is invariably lucid In a new introduction the authors sort out fact from legend and discern trends they address the validity of their own research methods and the applicability of their original findings to today s academic marketplace They observe that the essential commodity offered in the academic marketplace is still the same the mysterious intangible called prestige by which universities colleges departments disciplines fields of inquiry journals and ultimately faculty candidates are ranked from high to low and raised up and cast down accordingly

Higher Education in the Information Age Everette Eugene Dennis, Craig L. LaMay, 1993-01-01 College and university education has long been a material and intellectual luxury in American life Fewer than 38 percent of Americans have ever attended college and only about half that number hold bachelor s degrees While post World War Two legislation greatly democratized higher education the editors of this volume contend that the system has never been a public stewardship Many universities are devoted to private sector research rather than public learning to productivity rather than democratic discourse and because of diminished financial opportunities increasingly exclude poor working and lower middle class students many of them people of color The contributors to this volume recognize that the American system of higher education is the most open and egalitarian in the world Largely for this reason it is the only American institution which today enjoys a positive balance of trade Many more foreign students come to study at American universities than do Americans go to study abroad The study of higher education in an information age means examining higher education The place of economics in decision making is as a vehicle for social mobility The volume covers a myriad of themes the role of media ranking universities and their contribution to low expectations of universities the disjunction between massive support for college and university sports events and the intellectual and presumed academic missions of these institutions of higher learning and boosterism as a general phenomenon in funding Yet editors and contributors alike emphasize new currents in the educational agenda The essays cover efforts to close the gap between the mutual recriminations of universities and media leaders The theme of this volume is that there is a crisis in higher education and a crisis hi knowledge who produces it controls it uses it and benefits by it Properly understood the issues common to both higher education and the media have profound implications for public life This volume is critical of current practices but also mindful that the university remains a place in which civil forms of discourse are central and hence of great potential benefit to the dissemination of information and ideas as such It will be of interest to professional interested hi communication and education
