

organisations and pressing for public intervention to support wage-working women, and thus raising consciousness. Here perhaps they underestimate the comparative success of women's independent organisation in the US and overestimate the consciousness-raising effect of the incorporated women's movements in China and Sweden.

The discussion of the influence of economic policy centres around the thesis that the increasing entry of married women into wage labour explains family policy intervention. This was clearly not true of Sweden's reforms in the 1930s which, as they show, were pro-natalist in intention and effect. It was not until the mid 1960s in Sweden (as in Britain) that married women were recognised as 'their largest untapped labor supply, more easily integrated into the labor force than immigrant workers'. Hence the second phase of Swedish family policy reforms in the 1960s coincides with the requirements of the labour market. Similarly in China 'party support for increased social services has been less a response to need than to the perceived value of maintaining and increasing the number of working women'. There have been great fluctuations in commitment to urban day care services in China for example as labour policy fluctuated under the Great Leap Forward and the Cultural Revolution. In the US the emphasis in welfare policy has been on disciplining poor families and pushing single mothers into wage work, though there is little discussion of this in the book.

'The family in political culture' is a study of the ideology of the family and the notion of family privacy as represented in marriage and child care legislation. In the US 'the family acquired its inviolability because it was the property-holding unit' whereas in Sweden marriage is viewed as a 'moral union'. The reason for this difference remains a historical mystery (to me at least). Hence in Sweden cohabitantes are much more favourably treated and single mothers are much more economically independent. The right-wing view that public services and benefits will destroy the family is very effectively demolished by the evidence from Sweden and China which shows that 'government is seeking to use public policy to bolster and preserve the family rather than replace it'. It is, of course, the 'traditional' family in which the wife is confined to domestic labour and child care which the right-wing are so anxious to preserve. The material amassed in this book, particularly on Sweden and China, provides plenty of food for thought for those who advocate progressive family policies and state services as a means of diminishing women's oppression.

These two extremely similar collections represent the clearest statement to date of what has sadly become the dominant trend amongst the British left intelligentsia. This trend is now firmly established both in the Communist Party and in the left of the Labour Party, as well as being represented in a wide variety of other political and literary tendencies. While it lacks political influence in the older organisations, it must now be reckoned to have overtaken in intellectual prestige such competing influences as British

The Popular And The Political Essays On Socialism In The 1980s:

The Popular and the Political Mike Prior, 1981 The Popular and the Political Michael Prior, 2013-04-15 The failure of the left in Britain to achieve its objectives in the past and the rapidly changing nature of popular involvement in politics in recent years both suggest the need for a reappraisal of socialist strategy in the 1980s The Popular and the Political explores the need to redefine socialism in terms which extend beyond statism which has been the mark of both the social democracy of the last two Labour governments and the Marxist left and which reflect the changing nature of contemporary Britain The essays presented here consider social policy in a wide range of fields health housing energy and economic planning as well as the broad questions of democratic involvement in the political process CCCS Selected Working Papers Ann Gray, Jan Campbell, Mark Erickson, Stuart Hanson, Helen Wood, 2007-11-07 This collection of classic essays focuses on the theoretical frameworks that informed the work of the Centre for Contemporary Cultural Studies at the University of Birmingham the methodologies and working practices that the Centre developed for conducting academic research and examples of the studies carried out under the auspices of the Centre This volume is split into seven thematic sections that are introduced by key academics working in the field of cultural studies and includes a preface by eminent scholar Stuart Hall The thematic sections are Literature and Society Popular Culture and Youth Subculture Media Women's Studies and Feminism Race History Education and Work The State, Class and the Recession (Routledge Revivals) Stewart Clegg, Geoff Dow, Paul Boreham, 2013-10-18 The contributions to this edited collection first published in 1983 are based on two underlying themes The first examines the major recession that took hold of the global economy during the 1980s and assesses its effects on key areas of social structure including political and economic democracy and trade union representation The second theme considers the limitations of state intervention in such changing circumstances with particular reference to the welfare state This is a comprehensive title which is of great relevance to those with an interest in the current global economic situation and the potential impact of this on the welfare state and class structure EMPIRE STRIKES BACK Centre for Contemporary Cultural Studies, 2004-08-02 First Published in 1982 The Empire Strikes Back examines the place of race and racism in the political transformation of Britain at the end of the seventies and argues that Britain has entered a longterm political and economic crisis which has brought new urgency to the politics of race and nation The authors explore the elements of a new culturally focused racism which in representations of black families stresses their alienness and the supposed criminal inclinations of the black population They argue that the British state is very far from its popular image as a liberal democracy and that all our notions of culture nation and class are based on deeply racist structures Key areas of state intervention such as schooling policing and policy oriented race relations research are analysed to demonstrate that a definition of the growing crisis in the economy and social services is emerging which shifts the focus of blame on to black people The authors argue that existing race relations theory has significantly failed to deal adequately with the British situation In particular the experience of black women and the political organization of young black people raises major problems for race blind feminism and Eurocentric Marxism alike In conclusion the book assesses the political relation of race to class and suggests that any long term struggle against racism must begin by recognizing the autonomy of black struggles at all levels of British society International Bibliography of Social Science International Committee for Social Science Information and Documentation,1984-03-15 First published in 1984 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Gender, Class and Education (Routledge Revivals) Stephen Walker,Len Barton,2013-11-05 First published in 1983 Gender Class and Education is a collection of papers that formed presentations at the Westhill Sociology of Education Conference in January 1982 and is the fifth such collection to emerge from the annual conference The conference theme Race Class and Gender was not only chosen because of its topicality but also to provide a framework for debate between educational researchers and teachers The papers focus on the reproduction of gender relations through education and provide important insights into how this process works how it is resisted in schools and colleges and the possibilities for radical intervention This volume includes three teaching bibliographies on gender and education which were not presented at the conference but were compiled specially for the book Disability and Society Len Barton,2018-10-08 The study of disability has traditionally been influenced mainly by medical and psychological models The aim of this new text Disability and Society is to open up the debate by introducing alternative perspectives reflecting the increasing sociological interest in this important topic Disability and Society brings together for the first time some of the most recent original research in this rapidly expanding area The contributors both disabled and non disabled are all leading thinkers in their field and suggest new ways of understanding disability developing policy and challenging current practice Contemporary Political Ideologies Lyman Tower Sargent,1990 Since 1969 this book has been praised for its breadth of coverage and clarity It goes beyond the usual bland ahistorical and static mass of information to present arguments positions and counterpositions This edition includes coverage of events in China and the USSR liberation theology environmentalism and the fourth world

Circling Marx: Essays 1980-2020 Peter Beilharz,2020-12-07 Karl Marx circles us and we him This reflects the power of his legacy but it also indicates the nature of the intellectual process We move around objects of interest and insight working by successive approximations Peter Beilharz has been circling Marx for forty years This volume of essays expands the metaphor by working through three circles in the history of Marxism The first works with Marx the second with the classical legacy through to Bolshevism and western marxism the third steps closer to the present in thinkers such as Bauman Heller and Castoriadis Read together these essays represent a lifetime s engagement with Marx and his intellectual consequences
