Surveying The Glass Ceiling:

Surveying the Glass Ceiling Louise Ellison,1999 This research investigates the progress being made by a group of 607 men and women surveyors through the surveying profession The experiences of a randomly selected group have been analyzed to identify the characteristics of their employing organizations A Glass Ceiling Survey Ann M. Morrison,Carol Tropp Schreiber,Karl F. Price,1995 This handbook presents findings of a survey that asked human resources managers to identify current barriers preventing women and people of color from reaching senior management The survey was sent to 902 human resources managers at various organizations A total of 304 surveys were returned a 34 percent response rate The managers gave support to the notion that the glass ceiling involves a variety of barriers that continue to exist to some extent in their organizations Overall barriers rated as most significant differed from those identified by managers in a previous study the Guidelines on Leadership Diversity or GOLD Project The data suggest that a number of managers did not see a strong connection between diversity and the health of their organizations The two most common barriers included the preference of existing management to associate with people like themselves the discomfort factor and a lack of accountability In addition some diversity practices seemed to be most closely related to the two key barriers The five practices that were more closely correlated with overall effectiveness at the management and executive levels included 1 progress in meeting diversity goals is included in performance evaluation 2 diversity considerations are included in promotion criteria and decisions 3 diversity considerations are included in management succession planning 4 competence in managing a diverse work force is considered in management succession planning and 5 selection criteria and decisions include diversity considerations The most prevalent practices did not seem to represent the most promising solutions to the glass ceiling A recommendation is made to include progress toward diversity as part of the performance evaluation process The appendix contains survey questions and responses Contains 23 references LMI

Gender and Higher Education Management in Times of Crisis Sarah Barnard,Angela Wroblewski,2025-09-30 This edited book explores the role of higher education management during crises and analyses the responses and gendered consequences for women in particular Contributions adopt multidimensional multilevel and intersectional approaches to gender inequalities to better understand power relations as expressed through institutional and cultural change processes The chapters explore the ways in which crises play out and the extent to which they undermine ratify or reconfigure gender relations in higher education Contributing authors from different geographical locations also reflect on how higher education management conceives of gender when responding to crisis as well as the consequences of a binary approach and related essentialism The book will be of interest to students and researchers in the fields of higher education gender studies and organisation and management studies and higher education leadership and policy makers

Feminist Measures in Survey Research Catherine E. Harnois,2013 This title offers a new approach for bridging feminist theory and quantitative social science research Catherine E Harnois demonstrates how a multiracial feminist perspective can inform virtually every aspect of the research process from survey design and statistical modelling to the frameworks used to interpret the results

Advanced Research Methods in the Built Environment

Andrew Knight, Les Ruddock, 2009-03-16 This book provides a bridge between the introductory research methods books and the discipline specific higher level texts Its unique feature is the coverage of the detailed process of research rather than the findings of research projects Chapter authors have been carefully selected by their expertise discipline and location to give an eclectic range of perspectives Particular care has been taken to balance positivist with interpretivist approaches throughout The authors focus is on the practical consequences of research philosophies strategies and techniques by using their own research and by evaluating the work of others Advanced Research Methods in the Built Environment addresses common topics raised by postgraduate level researchers rather than dealing with all aspects of the research process Issues covered range from the practicalities of producing a journal article to the role of theory in research The material brought together here provides a valuable resource for the training and development of doctoral and young researchers and will contribute to a new sense of shared methodological understanding across built environment research
