Toward a Literary Ecology Karen E. Waldron, Rob Friedman, 2013-07-29 Scholarship of literature and the environment demonstrates myriad understandings of nature and culture While some work in the field results in approaches that belong in the realm of cultural studies other scholars have expanded the boundaries of ecocriticism to connect the practice more explicitly to disciplines such as the biological sciences human geography or philosophy Even so the field of ecocriticism has yet to clearly articulate its interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary nature In Toward a Literary Ecology: Places and Spaces in American Literature editors Karen E. Waldron and Robert Friedman have assembled a collection of essays that study the interconnections between literature and the environment to theorize literary ecology The disciplinary perspectives in these essays allow readers to comprehend places and environments and to represent express or strive for that comprehension through literature Contributors to this volume explore the works of several authors including Gary Snyder Karen Tei Yamashita Rachel Carson Terry Tempest Williams Chip Ward and Mary Oliver Other essays discuss such topics as urban fiction as a model of literary ecology the geographies of belonging in the work of Native American poets and the literary ecology of place in new nature writing Investigating texts for the complex interconnections they represent Toward a Literary Ecology suggests what such texts might teach us about the interconnections of our own world This volume also offers a means of analyzing representations of people in places within the realm of an historical cultural and geographically bounded yet diverse American literature Intended for students of literature and ecology this collection will also appeal to scholars of geography cultural studies philosophy biology history anthropology and other related disciplines world around us is rich and fertile and generative says Wohlpert His exploration of these literary works based on deep anthropology and Native American philosophy opens a pathway into a new way of thinking called sacred reason Founded on interdependence and interrelationship and on care and compassion sacred reason reminds us that divinity exists around us at all times We are invited to walk once again in a land filled with many gods The Writing Center Director's Resource Transference of orientalist images and identities to the American landscape and its inhabitants especially in the West in other words portrayal of the West as the Orient has been a common aspect of American cultural history Place names such as the Jordan River or Pyramid Lake offer notable examples but the imagery and its varied meanings are more widespread and significant Understanding that range and significance especially to the western part of the continent means coming to terms with the complicated nuanced ideas of the Orient and of the North American continent that European Americans brought to the West Such complexity is what historical geographer Richard Francaviglia unravels in this book Since the publication of Edward Said's book Orientalism the term has come to signify something one dimensionally negative In essence the orientalist vision was an ethnocentric characterization of the peoples of Asia and Africa and the Near East as exotic primitive others subject to conquest by the nations of Europe That now well established point which expresses a postcolonial perspective is critical but Francaviglia suggest that it overlooks much variation and complexity in the views of historical actors and writers many of whom thought of western places in terms of an idealized and romanticized Orient It likewise neglects positive images and interpretations to focus on those of a decadent and ostensibly inferior East We cannot understand well or fully what the pervasive orientalism found in western cultural history meant says Francaviglia if we focus only on its role as an intellectual engine for European imperialism It did play that role as well in the American West One only need think about characterizations of American Indians as Bedouins of the Plains destined for displacement by a settled frontier Other roles for orientalism though from romantic to commercial ones were also widely in play In Go East Young Man Francaviglia explores a broad range of orientalist images deployed in the context of European settlement of the American West and he unfolds their multiple significances Ecocultural Ethics Rayson K. Alex, S. Susan Deborah, Reena Cheruvalath, Gyan Prakash, 2017-10-18 The book offers twelve cases of ethics relating to ecology and culture The twelve cases presented in the twelve essays are written by eminent scholars from India USA Canada and Egypt Employing various ecocritical frameworks the writers have tried to understand analyse literary cinematic and other cultural texts and contexts The volume argues that the principles of ethics are as dynamic as culture and nature Any ecological perspectives issues conditions cannot be separated from their cultural contexts and thus need a culture specific scrutiny to understand the ethics of ecoculture

Treatments Lisa Diedrich, Creative expression inspired by disease has been criticized as a celebration of victimhood unmediated personal experience or just simply bad art Despite debate however memoirs written about illness particularly AIDS or cancer have proliferated since the late twentieth century and occupy a highly influential place on the cultural landscape today In Treatments Lisa Diedrich considers illness narratives demonstrating that these texts not only recount and interpret symptoms but also describe illness as an event that reflects wider cultural contexts including race gender class and sexuality Diedrich begins this theoretically rigorous analysis by offering examples of midcentury memoirs of tuberculosis She then looks at Susan Sontag's Illness As Metaphor Audre Lorde's The Cancer Journals and Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick's White Glasses showing how these breast cancer survivors draw on feminist health practices of the 1970s and also anticipate the figure that would appear in the wake of the AIDS crisis in the 1980s the politicized patient She further reveals how narratives written by doctors Abraham Verghese and Rafael Campo about treating people with AIDS can disrupt the doctor patient hierarchy and she explores practices of witnessing that emerge in writing by Paul Monette and John Bayley Through these records of intensely personal yet universal experience Diedrich demonstrates how language both captures and fails to capture these scenes of loss and how illness narratives affect the literary medical and cultural contexts from which they arise Finally by examining the ways in which the sick speak and are spoken for she argues for an ethics of failure the revaluation of loss as creating new possibilities for how we live and die Lisa Diedrich is assistant professor of women's studies at Stony Brook University
