Meet Patricia Wright

Dr. Patricia Wright is one of the main advisers for the new IMAX 3D documentary movie "Island of Lemurs: Madagascar."

Patricia studied biology and anthropology in college and now teaches anthropology. She spent years studying lemurs in the wild. She convinced Madagascar officials to set aside a national park for the lemurs and other animals.

She guided the "Island of Lemurs" moviemakers as they filmed in rugged conditions in Madagascar. There are few roads or hotels, so if it rained, it meant they might not be able to film for a week. Travel was often difficult. In one area, it took them 10 hours to go only 60 miles because they had to keep digging the car out of the mud.

One time they had to tie two canoes together and paddle against the current in the middle of a lightning storm. They filmed part of the movie from a hot-air balloon.
