Abstract

This article focuses on Johnson & Johnson baby product compensation in practice and related case studies. This is an overview of Johnson & Johnson's baby product liability and explains issues that have arisen for consumers. Product liability is the liability of related parties in the production chain of any product for damages caused by the product. In the name of commercial profit, it is useful to protect the consumer from unnecessary risks and problems from harmful end products or malicious parties. Johnson and Johnson's case studies of defects and children's product liability issues are useful in providing the consumer with important information to deal with a similar situation and providing the manufacturer with suggestions for improvement to avoid similar problems and provide more and better consumer satisfaction and healthy production. In today's market, all corporate activities are more focused on delighting the client by attending to their needs through efficient service. Because baby products are expensive, businesses are constantly searching for the most innovative solutions. In order to ensure their child's safety and security, parents are continuously concerned with purchasing the best products available and following all safety precautions. Also this article reveals about the company's background, history, as well as problems faced by the company.

Keywords: Product liability, Johnson and Johnson, Consumers, Background, Case studies, History.

1. INTRODUCTION

Johnson & Johnson is a Fortune 500 company that manufactures pharmaceuticals and consumer items. James Wood Johnson, Robert Wood Johnson, and Edward Mead Johnson, three brothers, formed it in 1886. More than 265 countries are served by the company's businesses, which operate in more than 60 of them. Their first product was Johnson's baby powder, which arrived in India in 1947(Nandal, N et al.,2021). Baby care items are an example of a product category that consumers favoured at one point in time. When their children are older, parents will not typically exhibit a preference for the same product category; instead, they will only do so when a new baby is in their care. The relationship between a brand and its customers can take several forms. Brand repurchasing intention, brand extension acceptance, word-of-mouth (WOM), temporary deficiency acceptability, and brand commitment can be used to summarise the important ideas in brand-customer relationships. The goal is to comprehend how these variables are impacted by consumer confidence in a product category like newborn care items, where parents plan to have just a transient relationship(Kavitha M.A&ramesh.k 2017). Product liability is a significant obligation for manufacturers to maintain customer safety, particularly in the case of baby products because babies are young, vulnerable humans who require extra caution while using potentially dangerous products. Every parent wants their kids to grow up with strong, healthy bodies free from anything that could cause them to pass away. The deadly elements that work against product responsibility include poisonous, damaging, and combustible compounds. To protect the baby from harm, they should be taken out(Maksom et al., 2014).

Up to 4% of fat in infant stools can be difficult for water to completely eliminate. Similar to meconium, it is challenging to remove because of its tenacious nature. The special lotion in Johnson's Baby Skincare wipes dissolves both water- and fat-based compounds, making it possible to remove

Social Responsiveness of Infants Evelyn B. Thoman, Sharland Trotter, 1978 Abstract New concepts in infant development of capabilities for social response are examined in a publication of a pediatrics round table series for child health care professionals and parents Since understanding one's baby is necessary to successful parenting insights into the infant's sensitivity and response to its new world during the first year of life are presented The infant is seen as a partner in a mother-child system Section I describes infant rhythms and responses in terms of preparation for that partnership Section II proposes developmental models which view the infant as a social being Section III reviews the ontogeny of the mother-infant relationship The human infant has a long and dependent relationship with those that give it its care These new perspectives consider the infant as being well prepared for interaction with its environment and the people in it Origins of the Infant's Social Responsiveness Evelyn B. Thoman, 1979 Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), 1983 First multi-year cumulation covers six years 1965-70 National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), Origins of the Infant's Social Responsiveness, Resources in Education, 1984 Children Adapt Elnora M. Gilfoyle, Ann P. Grady, Josephine C. Moore, 1990 Children Adapt provides a developmental approach to pediatric rehabilitation and a theoretical framework for the evaluation and treatment of children This extensive revision of the successful first edition now includes stated learning objectives self-study questions and identification of key points allowing the book to be used more effectively as a student textbook as well as a practitioner's reference New material has been added to reflect the most up-to-date trends in the field of pediatric development creating an innovative insightful learning tool Highlights of this revised edition include An overview of the rudiments of theory building New material discussing application of theory to pediatric rehabilitation Explicit discussions of occupational performance skills A comprehensive glossary of terms Encounters with Children Suzanne D. Gottfried, 1985 Origins of Attachment Mary Colleen Stainton, 1986 The High-risk Neonate Jane K. Sweeney, 1986 This groundbreaking volume addresses the major challenges facing practitioners of neonatal treatment the new and exciting subspecialty of pediatric therapy practice Experts fully explore how professionals can provide safe and therapeutic intervention for high-risk neonates and their parents They provide a readable comprehensive overview of neonatal neuropathology neurologic and behavioral assessment and clinical management strategies for newborns at risk for neurological dysfunction The High Risk Neonate is a unique volume that explores the medical complications of the prematurely born neonate and presents outcome data from early physical therapy intervention with infants Maternal Employment and Children's Development Adele Eskeles Gottfried, Allen W. Gottfried, 2013-11-21 In a review written in 1979 I noted that there was a paucity of research examining the effects of maternal employment on the infant and young child and also that longitudinal studies of the effects of maternal employment were needed Hoffman 1979 In the last 10 years there has been a flurry of research activity focused on the mother's employment during the child's early years and much of this work has been longitudinal All of the studies reported in this volume are at least short term longitudinal studies and most of them examine the effects of maternal employment during the early years The increased focus on maternal employment during infancy is not a response to the mandate of that review but rather reflects the new employment patterns in the United States In March 1985 the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that 49.4% of married women with children less than a year old were employed outside the home Hayghe 1986 This figure is up from 39% in 1980 and more than double the rate in 1970 By now most mothers of children under 3 are in the labor force

Disabilities and Prenatal Risk Catherine Caldwell Brown, 1983 The booklet summarizes proceedings from a conference on prenatal and perinatal factors associated with learning disabilities and neurological problems Many of the papers report data from the Collaborative Perinatal Project of the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke a longitudinal study of pregnancy conditions The first 12 papers consider the following interdisciplinary factors in learning disabilities genetics hormones and the brain microneuronal hypoplasia nutrition maternal infections environmental pollutants prenatal drugs smoking and drinking obstetric medications obstetrical trauma low birth weight and issues in infant assessment A report of participants discussion focuses on definitional issues animal models and human behavior links between biochemistry and behavior and prediction prevention and intervention CL Birth, Interaction, and Attachment Marshall H. Klaus, Martha Oschrin Robertson, 1982 Provided are summaries of conference presentations discussing aspects of birth parent child interaction and attachment behavior Material in part I explores perspectives on pregnancy and the perinatal period Included are discussions of birth in nonindustrial societies progress in the study of maternal behavior in animals the physiological effects of a supportive companion during labor and the milieu and obstetrical positions during labor In part II summaries concern infants and mothers contributions to attachment Topics discussed are early caregiving and later patterns of attachment the transmission of affect between mothers and infants studies of parent infant bonding maternal stress following the birth of a second child the father's role in family development and the father child relationship Part III focuses on the development of relationships in high risk situations Specific attention is given to the uses of behavioral assessment of premature infants in the context of intervention findings of an anthropological study of a special care nursery the impact of medical complications on parental behavior in the premature nursery family oriented intervention with failure to thrive infants support for hospital caregivers and staff burnout in the neonatal intensive care unit Applications of recent research findings to clinical care are discussed in part IV RH

Maternal Attachment and Mothering Disorders

Marshall H. Klaus, Treville Leger, Mary Anne Trause, 1982 The process by which parents become attached to their infants was the focus of a roundtable discussion Participating were students of the attachment process in various animal species as well as clinicians and researchers from various disciplines engaged in studying the development of attachment in parents of normal infants parents of premature or sick infants and parents of battered or failure to thrive infants The discussion is reported in three parts First examined are disorders of attachment featuring problems of failure to thrive and child abuse neglect as they affect infants and their parents attention is given to disruptive mechanisms resulting in abnormalities Delineated in the second part are aspects of the process of attachment parallels in behavior patterns of humans and animals are reviewed and parent child interaction as a developmental force is discussed The role of the father is additionally described with emphasis given to the ways the father can play a very useful part by interacting with infant and mother Stressing various parent visiting practices prevalent in intensive care nurseries in the United States the discussion in the third part explores problems of attachment It is emphasized that mothers of premature infants should be permitted to have early physical contact with their infants in order to establish early mother infant bonding RH Minimizing High-risk Parenting Valerie J. Sasserath,1983 The conference papers and discussions presented in this volume convey current information and are intended to serve as a guide for intervention by health professionals and others involved with high risk parenting situations High risk parenting is defined as a social condition in which normal patterns of parent child behavior and interaction are disturbed Contents focus on two major issues 1 how interventions associated with the parenting process can be more effectively managed to help the child at risk and 2 the increasing recognition of the need for more effective communication between child health professionals and parents Specifically the volume includes sections devoted to three topic areas Part I focuses on successful parenting emphasizing basic adaptations the black community and factors in predicting success Articles presented in part II discuss numerous concerns including pregnancy adolescent mothers medically impaired infants parents of the premature infant or child lost by death pediatric social illnesses and child abuse and neglect Discussion in part III focuses on prevention of high risk parenting outcomes and describes an intervention program and perinatal coaching Summaries are provided following each section and an appendix detailing funding and cost benefit analysis of services for high risk families and infants is included BJD Essentials of Maternity Nursing Irene M.
