The Social Theories of Ageing Pohl Ron, 2017-06-20 Essay from the year 2014 in the subject Sociology Old Age grade 5 0 University of Michigan language English abstract Ageing is a constant process that every individual goes through as long as there is still life This process is an essential part of nature as it ensures that the homeostasis of the universe is kept constant Ageing has to do with the additive effects of changes that occur over time and in human beings refers to the multidimensional progression of biological psychological and social changes that occur In humans ageing has its advantages and disadvantages which reflect the growth and expansion of some dimensions of human life while on the other hand others decline The inevitability of ageing has driven a whole lot of researches into finding out how and why ageing occurs This is why there has been several theories developed to help understand the phenomenon of ageing The social theories of ageing offer a much different perspective as regards the inevitable process of ageing its meanings and its impact on the ageing individuals themselves and the general society Even though there are existing controversies about the accuracy of these theories the response of the society to the care and support of the elderly is still being governed by some of the characteristics and factors described by the theoretical assumptions

Social Theory and Regional Studies in the Global Age Saïd Amir Arjomand, 2014-05-19 In this pioneering volume leading international scholars argue for the development of a new approach to social theory that draws on regional studies for the conduct of comparative analysis in the global age Social Theory and Regional Studies in the Global Age moves beyond facile generalizations based on the historical experience of modernization in the West by highlighting differences rather than similarities and contrasts rather than commonalities and by examining civilizational processes and culturally specific developmental patterns distinctive of different world regions Essays combine comparative and historical sociology with civilizational analysis and the study of multiple and alternative modernities Different patterns of modernization are compared within the framework of global local compressed communication and interaction that results from globalization The introductory chapter puts the present effort in the context of the seminal work of three generations of comparative sociologists and what follows is a penetrating analysis of modernization and globality opening the way for rectifying the erasure of the historical experience of a very sizeable portion of humankind from the foundation of social theory
