science is one of the most remarkable and fascinating intellectual achievements of the modern era. It brings together psychology, neuroscience, artificial intelligence, computing, philosophy, linguistics, and anthropology in the project of understanding the mind by modelling its workings. Oxford University Press now presents a masterful history of cognitive science told by one of its most eminent practitioners. The Origin of Language Madeleine Beekman, 2025-07-29. The Professor Emerita at the University of Sydney makes a radical, compelling new account of the birth of language that puts women at the centre of the story. Conventional explanations for how humans became the language animal proposed by men such as Noam Chomsky, Steven Pinker, and Yuval Noah Harari focus on our need to cooperate to hunt, fight, or make tools. In this revolutionary new account, evolutionary biologist Madeleine Beekman locates a more convincing origin of language: the need to share childcare. Through cutting-edge science infused with sharp humour and insights into the history of biology and its luminaries, Beekman reveals the happy accidents hidden in our molecular biology, our chromosomes, DNA, and proteins that led to one of the most fateful events in the history of life on Earth: humans giving birth to underbaked, highly dependent babies. To care for them, early human communities had to cooperate and coordinate, and it was this unprecedented need for communication that triggered the creation of human language and changed everything. Both enlightening and entertaining, The Origin of Language is a landmark publication by a brilliant biologist on how a culture of collaboration and care has shaped our existence from the very beginning. The Elementary School Library Collection, Phases 1-2-3, 1988.

Primate Studies, Ethics and Trauma Robert Ingersoll, Antonina Anna Scarnà, 2023-02-23. Primate Studies, Ethics and Trauma offers an analytical re-examination of the research conducted into the linguistic abilities of the Oklahoma chimpanzees, uncovering the historical reality of the research. It has been 50 years since the first language experiments on chimpanzees. Robert Ingersoll was one of the researchers from 1975 to 1983. He is well known for being one of the main carers and best friend of the chimpanzee Nim Chimsky, but there were other chimpanzees in the University of Oklahoma's Institute for Primate Studies, including Washoe, Moja, Kelly, Booe, and Onan, who were taught sign language in the quest to discover whether language is learned or innate in humans. Antonina Anna Scarnà's expertise in language acquisition and neuroscience offers a vehicle for critical evaluation of those studies. Ingersoll and Scarnà investigate how this research failed to address the emotional needs of the animals. Research into trauma has made scientific advances since those studies. It is time to consider the research from a different perspective, examining the neglect and cruelty that was inflicted on those animals in the name of psychological science. This book re-examines those cases, addressing directly the suffering and traumatic experiences endured by the captive chimpanzees, in particular the female chimpanzee Washoe and her resultant inability to be a competent mother. This book discusses the unethical nature of the studies in the context of recent research on trauma and offers a specific and direct psychological message proposing to finally close the door on the language side of these chimpanzee studies. This book is a novel and groundbreaking account. It will be of interest to lay readers and academics alike.

Those working as research experimental and clinical psychologists will find this book of interest as will psychotherapists linguists anthropologists historians of science and primatologists as well as those involved in primate sanctuary and conservation
