Anomie, Strain and Subcultural Theories of Crime Joanne M. Kaufman, 2017-05-15 Anomie strain and subcultural theories are among the leading theories of crime Anomie theories state that crime results from the failure of society to regulate adequately the behavior of individuals particularly the efforts of individuals to achieve monetary success Strain theories focus on the impact of strains or stressors on crime including the inability to achieve monetary success through legal channels And subcultural theories argue that some individuals turn to crime because they belong to groups that excuse justify or approve of crime This volume presents the leading selections on each theory including the original statements of the theories key efforts to revise the theories and the latest statements of each theory The coeditors Robert Agnew and Joanne Kaufman are prominent strain theorists and their introductory essay provides an overview of the theories discusses the relationship between them and introduces each of the selections

The Nurture Versus Biosocial Debate in Criminology Kevin M. Beaver, J.C. Barnes, Brian B. Boutwell, 2014-01-31 The Nurture Versus Biosocial Debate in Criminology On the Origins of Criminal Behavior and Criminality takes a contemporary approach to address the sociological and the biological positions of human behavior by allowing preeminent scholars in criminology to speak to the effects of each on a range of topics Kevin M Beaver J C Barnes and Brian B Boutwell aim to facilitate an open and honest debate between the more traditional criminologists who focus primarily on environmental factors and contemporary biosocial criminologists who examine the interplay between biology genetics and environmental factors Medico-legal Injuries Archibald McKendrick,1927 A practical dictionary of the English language Dorsey Gardner,1894 Bulletin Pennsylvania. Dept. of Labor and Industry,1925 Criminal Belief Systems Glenn D. Walters,2002-09-30 Walters integrates information from traditional criminological models and findings from developmental psychology to form a system of five belief systems self view world view past view present view and future view designed to explain crime initiation and maintenance While reviewing belief systems that support crime Walters also offers a model of change through which belief systems incongruent with crime can be constructed He begins with a review of six traditional criminological models each of which is considered to possess sufficient breadth and substance to advance our understanding of crime Information gathered from these major theoretical systems is integrated with research from developmental psychology to create a system of crime congruent belief systems The belief systems along with recent research on attributions outcome expectancies efficacy expectancies values goals and thinking styles are then used to construct a general theory of crime and explain four specific categories of crime violent crime sexual assault white collar crime and drug trafficking Walters concludes with a model of assisted change whereby belief systems incongruent with crime are initiated and maintained with the intent of helping people abandon crime congruent lifestyles This change model revolves around four core elements responsibility confidence meaning community each of which is emphasized in a clinician's interactions with clients seeking to abandon crime congruent lifestyles As Walters maintains belief systems are instrumental in both the development and cessation of crime congruent lifestyles Of particular interest to scholars students researchers and practitioners involved with criminology criminal justice and clinical and correctional psychology Juvenile Delinquency in a Diverse Society Kristin A.
