Getting an Heir Ann Waltner, 2019-03-31 The need for heirs in any traditional society is a compelling one In traditional China where inheritance and notions of filiality depended on the production of progeny the need was nearly absolute As Ann Waltner makes clear in this broadly researched study of adoption in the late Ming and early Ch ing periods the getting of an heir was a complex even paradoxical undertaking Although adoption involving persons of the same surname was the only arrangement ritually and legally sanctioned in Chinese society adoption of persons of a different surname was a relatively common practice Using medical and ritual texts legal codes local gazetteers biography and fiction Waltner examines the multiple dimensions of the practice of adoption and identifies not only the dominant ideology prohibiting adoption across surname lines but also a parallel discourse justifying the practice      Law Without Lawyers, Justice Without Courts Bee Chen Goh,2016-12-05 The Chinese have since ancient times professed a non litigious outlook Similarly their preference for mediation has fascinated the West for centuries Mediation has been popularized by the Chinese who subscribe to the Confucian notions of harmony and compromise It has been perpetuated in the People s Republic of China and by the overseas Chinese communities elsewhere such as in Malaysia and Taiwan Seen as the chief contributing factor in their litigation averse nature as well as the reason behind the significant role given to traditional mediation this compelling book traces the cultural tradition of the Chinese It uses rural Chinese Malaysians as illustrative examples and offers new insights into the nature of mediation East and West It is an important reference and essential resource for anyone keen to learn about traditional Chinese concepts of law justice and dispute settlement Equally it makes a unique contribution to the existing ADR literature by undertaking a socio legal study on traditional Chinese mediation      Creating Market Socialism Carolyn L.
