Porter,2013-04-17 The worldwide consumption of surfactants now exceeds several million tonnes per annum Six of the major types represent approximately 80% of the volume consumed whereas the remaining 20% is made up of approximately 40 different chemical types Commercially produced surface active agents are not pure chemicals and within each chemical type there can be tremendous variation Technical staff who are not familiar with surfactants are frequently bewildered by the enormous variety of different products on the market and the vast body of literature which exists on the composition and properties of surfactants The selection of the best surfactant for any given use therefore becomes a major problem This volume arose from the clear need to have available a simple reference book summarising the different types of surfactants on the market and their properties The concept and structure of the book evolved from early attempts to define chemical structure property relationships of all the different types of surfactants commercially available into a simple handbook providing essential background information for the surfactant user It is realised that most users will be developing their own data bank of structure end use property relationships and they will therefore be the experts on end use Systematic very apropos to reflect on how these symposia have evolved to their present size and status The pedigree of this series of symposia goes back to 1976 when the premier symposium in this series was held Actually in 1976 it was a modest start and it was not possible at that time to gaze at the crystal ball and predict what would be the state of affairs in 1986 For historical purposes it should be recorded here that the first symposium was held in Albany NY under the title Micellization Solubilization and Microemulsions the second symposium was christened Solution Chemistry of Surfactants and was held in Knoxville TN in 1978 the venue for the third symposium in 1980 was Potsdam NY and it was dubbed International
