Systemic Therapy For Genitourinary Cancers:

Systemic Therapy for Genitourinary Cancers Douglas E. Johnson, 1989 Diagnosis and Treatment of Genitourinary Malignancies Kenneth J. Pienta, 2012-12-06 The field of genito urinary oncology is rapidly evolving at virtually every level Significant advances have been made in our understanding of the molecular and cellular events which contribute to the generation of GU malignancies At the same time similar advances have been made in the clinical arena which have improved the diagnosis and treatment of urologic cancers This volume attempts to summarize those advances which most impact us as clinicians and has been divided into three sections Section One Diagnostic advances the use of molecular medicine in the diagnosis and prognosis of GU malignancies details how epidemiologic studies and new molecular techniques are impacting our ability to diagnose and treat GU tumors Section Two Surgical and radiation advances details the recent major advances in the treatment of organ confined cancers Section Three Medical advances addresses major issues in the treatment of metastatic disease This volume will serve as a compendium of the advances both at the basic science and clinical levels which are currently impacting practicing oncologists and urologists Genitourinary Cancers Siamak Daneshmand, Kevin G. Chan, 2018-08-31 This book addresses the most pressing current questions in the management of urologic malignancies The rapid advances in imaging and molecular markers are placed into a clinical context with explanation of their effects on prognosis and treatment planning Similarly progress in immunotherapy is carefully examined focusing in particular on the role of immune checkpoint inhibitors in both early and late stage urologic malignancies Looking beyond the improvements in minimally invasive techniques for urologic cancers the impacts of care coordination pathways and enhanced recovery after surgery protocols are reviewed Readers will also find enlightening discussion of the decision algorithm for the treatment of early stage high grade bladder cancer taking into account evidence on the most advanced treatment options and the circumstances in which surgery may need to be expedited The penultimate chapter discusses the Cancer Genome Atlas project for bladder cancer and the book closes by considering contemporary medical and surgical management of testicular cancer Malignancies of the Genitourinary Tract Rolf Ackermann, Volker Diehl, 2012-12-06 Malignancies originating from the urogenital tract account for about 20% of all solid neoplasias The various tumor types including carcinoma of the prostate transitional cell carcinoma renal cell carcinoma and testicular germ cell tumors differ widely in terms of biological features in incidence and appearance diagnostic work up and management It is not surprising that this complexity of urologic oncology with its related problems has increasingly attracted both experimental investigators and clinical experts Only time will tell whether the achievements that today are considered as progress will turn out to be significant contributions towards the ultimate goal the cure of the patients life threatening diseases with little or no side effects However many innovations and improvements have already taken place in the field of urologic oncology within recent years The high pace of innovative development requires continuous thorough and critical updating of our knowledge so that persisting deficits can be defined the basic requirement for posing new scientific questions The following examples may serve to illustrate the recent developments and the resulting new problems and questions Recently it has become evident that carcinoma of the prostate must be detected earlier to enable us to cure more of the affected patients in the future than currently

Combination Therapy in Urological Malignancy Philip H. Smith, 2012-12-06 Any discussion of the present success in management of urological cancers evokes a mixed response Oncologists and urologists can enjoy the success with chemotherapy for testicular cancers but cannot forget the dismal results with any form of treatment other than surgery for renal carcinoma But these are the less frequent urological tumours what are the attitudes to the more common prostate and bladder cancers Intensive study many clinical trials and much debate lead us to the conclusion that we understand them better we can tailor the treatment more appropriately to the individual patient but there remains some uncertainty as to the overall success that we have achieved There have been no striking changes in the 5 year survival data Clinicians tend to see their success in terms of their special interest Radiotherapists point to their success in stage reduction but what are we to do with the many patients whose tumour is unaltered by radiotherapy Urological surgeons and especially those who are still influenced by the shadow of Halsted point to their success in excising the cancer but apart from that highly selected group what are we to do for the very large number of patients for whom surgery is inappropriate Bystanders can only watch and listen to the arguments for and against these views
