It was where all of life's celebrations took place where we took things apart when our mothers were out of the house.

It was where one would find string, rubber bands matches washers, safety pins, sellotape batteries bottle openers pencils.

It was where the visitors were entertained when the best sheet in the house would be washed ironed creased and made to look like the best of Irish linen.

It was where there was full and plenty and candles at Christmas and where the dog knew which one of us sat too far away from it.

It was where letters were written and bills opened and where we discussed politics and shared news and views and stories.

It was where everything was put before being placed on a shelf.

It was where heavy heads in cupped palms rested on elbows when there was nothing else to put there.
