The Literature of the Ancient Egyptians, An Account of Egypt, The Religions of Ancient Egypt and Babylonia, Scarabs: The History, Manufacture and Symbolism of the Scarabæus in Ancient Egypt, Phoenicia, Sardinia, Etruria Sir Ernest Alfred Thompson Wallis Budge, Herodotus, Archibald Henry Sayce, Isaac Myer, 2020-09-28 The Literature of ancient Egypt is the product of a period of about four thousand years and it was written in three kinds of writing which are called hieroglyphic hieratic and demotic In the first of these the characters were pictures of objects in the second the forms of the characters were made as simple as possible so that they might be written quickly and in the third many of them lost their picture form altogether and became mere symbols Egyptian writing was believed to have been invented by the god Tehuti or Thoth and as this god was thought to be a form of the mind and intellect and wisdom of the God who created the heavens and the earth the picture characters or hieroglyphs as they are called were held to be holy or divine or sacred Certain religious texts were thought to possess special virtue when written in hieroglyphs and the chapters and sections of books that were considered to have been composed by Thoth himself were believed to possess very great power and to be of the utmost benefit to the dead when they were written out for them in hieroglyphs and buried with them in their coffins Thoth also invented the science of numbers and as he fixed the courses of the sun moon and stars and ordered the seasons he was thought to be the first astronomer He was the lord of wisdom and the possessor of all knowledge both heavenly and earthly divine and human and he was the author of every attempt made by man to draw paint and carve As the lord and maker of books and as the skilled scribe he was the clerk of the gods and kept the registers wherein the deeds of men were written down The deep knowledge of Thoth enabled him to find out the truth at all times and this ability caused the Egyptians to assign to him the position of Chief Judge of the dead A very ancient legend states that Thoth acted in this capacity in the great trial that took place in heaven when Osiris was accused of certain crimes by his twin brother Set the god of evil Thoth examined the evidence and proved to the gods that the charges made by Set were untrue and that Osiris had spoken the truth and that Set was a liar For this reason every Egyptian prayed that Thoth might act for him as he did for Osiris and that on the day of the Great Judgment Thoth might preside over the weighing of his heart in the Balance All the important religious works in all periods were believed to have been composed either by himself or by holy scribes who were inspired by him They were believed to be sources of the deepest wisdom the like of which existed in no other books in the world And it is probably to these books that Egypt owed her fame for learning and wisdom which spread throughout all the civilised world The Books of Thoth which late popular tradition in Egypt declared to be as many as 36 525 in number were revered by both natives and foreigners in a way which it is difficult for us in these days to realise The scribes who studied and copied these books were also specially honoured for it was believed that the spirit of Thoth the twice great and thrice great god dwelt in them The profession of the scribe was considered to be most honourable and its rewards were great for no rank and no dignity were too high for the educated scribe Thoth appears in the papyri and on the monuments as an ibis headed man and his companion is usually a dog headed ape called Asten In the Hall of the Great Judgment he is seen holding in one hand a reed with which he is writing on a palette the result of the weighing of the heart of the dead man in the Balance The gods accepted the report of Thoth without question and rewarded the good soul and punished the bad according to his statement

The Egyptian Conception of Immortality, An Account of Egypt, The Arts and Crafts of Ancient Egypt, Scarabs: The History, Manufacture and Symbolism of the Scarabaeus in Ancient Egypt, Phoenicia, Sardinia, Etruria, And The Robbers of Egypt George Andrew Reisner,Various Authors,Heliodorus,Herodotus,Isaac Myer,Sir William Matthew Flinders Petrie,2020-09-28 Of the nations which have contributed to the direct stream of civilization Egypt and Mesopotamia are at present believed to be the oldest The chronological dispute as to the relative antiquity of the two countries is of minor importance for while in Babylonia the historical material is almost entirely inscriptional in Egypt we know the handicrafts the weapons the arts and to a certain extent the religious beliefs of the race up to a period when it was just emerging from the Stone Age In a word Egypt presents the most ancient race whose manner of life is known to man From the beginning of its history that is from about 4500 B C we can trace the development of a religion one of whose most prominent elements was a promise of a life after death It was still a great religion when the Christian doctrine of immortality was enunciated In the early centuries of the Christian era it seemed almost possible that the worship of Osiris and Isis might become the religion of the classical world and the last stand made by civilized paganism against Christianity was in the temple of Isis at Philae in the sixth century after Christ. It is clear that a religion of such duration must have offered some of those consolations to man that have marked all great religions, chief of which is the faith in a spirit in something that preserves the personality of the man and does not perish with the body. This faith was in fact one of the chief elements in the Egyptian religion, the element best known to us through the endless cemeteries which fill the desert from one end of Egypt to the other and through the funerary inscriptions. It is necessary, however, to correct the prevailing impression that religion played the greatest part in Egyptian life or even a greater part than it does in Moslem Egypt. The mistaken belief that death and the well being of the dead overshadowed the existence of the living is due to the fact that the physical character of the country has preserved for us the cemeteries and the funerary temples better than all the other monuments. The narrow strip of fat black land along the Nile produces generally its three crops a year. It is much too valuable to use as a cemetery. But more than that, it is subject to periodic saturation with water during the inundation and is therefore unsuitable for the burials of a nation which wished to preserve the contents of the graves. On the other hand, the desert which bounds this fertile strip so closely that a dozen steps will usually carry one from the black land to the gray desert offers a dry preserving soil with absolutely no value to the living. Thus all the funerary monuments were erected on the desert and except where intentionally destroyed they are preserved to the present day. The palaces, the towns, the farms, and many of the great temples which were erected on the black soil have been pulled down for building material or buried deep under the steadily rising deposits of the Nile. The tombs of six thousand years of dead have accumulated on the desert edge. Moreover, our impression of these tombs has been formed from the monuments erected by kings, princes, priests, and the great and wealthy men of the kingdom. The multitude of plain unadorned burial places which the scientific excavator records by the thousands have escaped the attention of scholars interested in Egypt from the point of view of a comparison of religions. It has also been overlooked that the strikingly colored mummies and the glaring burial apparatus of the late period cost very little to prepare. The manufacture of mummies was a regular trade in the Ptolemaic period at least. Mummy cases were prepared in advance with blank spaces for the names. I do not think that any more expense was incurred in Egyptian funerals in the dynastic period than is the case among the modern Egyptians. The importance of the funerary rites to the living must therefore not be exaggerated.
