Army. Royal Army Service Corps, 1955 History of the King's Regiment (Liverpool) 1914-1919 Volume III Everard Wyrall, 2012-09-04 Volume III of III This is an impressive history by the most prolific author of Great War divisional and regimental histories a fine tribute to a regiment that contributed 49 battalions to the nation's war effort 26 of them served overseas including the 2nd Battalion which was in India in August 1914 and remained there throughout the war It is also a tribute to the author who died in 1933 before he could finish the third volume the final few chapters were completed by Capt W Synge of the 1st Battalion All 23 front line battalions served on the Western Front one of them 14th in Salonika as well The Roll of Honour lists 14 200 dead six VCs were won one of them by an officer Capt O A Reid attached to another regiment and 58 Battle Honours were awarded This work is set out in chronological order each volume dealing with a specific period and ending with the Roll of Honour for that period and citations for any VC Dates are in the margin and so is the identification of the battalion involved in the action being described This final volume completes the story beginning with Third Ypres and ending with a very brief chapter on the 2nd Battalion in India As it may be imagined there is plenty of detail in a history so generous with space as this with its three volumes and the narrative is supported with clear maps National Service Life Stories Peter Gurney, Matthew Grant, Joel Morley, 2025-01-25 National service was a defining feature for a generation of young men in post war Britain Around 2.3 million of them were called up between the end of World War Two and 1963 when conscription ended However national service was forgotten almost before it had ended a process aided subsequently by professional historians who have been reluctant to assess its longer term influence on British social and political history Based on original oral interviews with well over one hundred men this book explores the ways in which compulsory military participation reverberated in the memories of interviewees long beyond the end of conscription and how these early military experiences shaped their later life stories Unlike existing accounts that tend to rely on memoirs written by officers or else oral interviews that concentrate narrowly on the details of military service this study focusses instead on men from working class backgrounds and it situates national service in the context of the life course and the wider transformations that have occurred in British society since conscription ended In so doing the work shines new light on important areas of current scholarly interest and historiographical concern including the changing meaning and experience of class masculinity and citizenship as well as the complexities of popular memory History of the 43rd and 52nd (Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire) Light Infantry Captain J. E. H. Neville, 2012-03-27 Today's British soldiers serving in Iraq will know the country in which much of this unit history is set the land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers known in the Great War as Mesopotamia Unusually for such a work of record the author lays down the background to the Great War in the Middle East in some detail stressing such factors as the German Turkish alliance the building of the Berlin to Baghdad railway and Britain's interest in the Persian Iranian oilfields He also reports events with a topical resonance today such as anti British riots in Basra and the declaration of a Jihad The 43rd took part in the defeat of the Turks at Khan Baghdadi and after the armistice in the spring of 1919 was re deployed to Archangel in northern Russia in an effort to nip the Bolshevik revolution in the bud Under the command of General Sir Edmund Tiny Ironside the 43rd battled gallantly against Bolshevik forces although beset by flies mosquitoes bloodsucking ticks called clegs and their unreliable White Russian allies At last partly through lack of progress and partly due to political pressure against an unpopular foreign adventure another echo of today the unit was withdrawn in the autumn of 1919 An intriguing and unusual account of two little known campaigns with eerily prophetic echoes of events in Iraq today Report on the Examination of Lieutenants and Captains, Majors and Officers of the Special Reserve Great Britain.
