Over the River Christo, Jeanne-Claude, 2008 In 1992 the infamous environmental installation artists Christo and Jeanne Claude took their first trip west in search of a site for a new temporary artwork in this case a stream of successive translucent fabric panels that would be suspended for two summer weeks across the banks of a Rocky Mountain river high enough above the water to allow kayakers rafters or pedestrians to drift along below it and close enough to a road that the piece could be approached and enjoyed by car or bus On subsequent trips they investigated the headwaters of 89 rivers in six states logging 14 000 miles onto their odometer until they finally settled on a site along the Arkansas River in the state of Colorado Then they began the arduous process of getting permission from all of the necessary local bureaucracies and activist groups This book documents the process from 1992 until 2005 at which point the artists were still only halfway there The project will not come to fruition until the year 2010 at the earliest As with all previous projects Over the River is financed entirely by Christo and Jeanne Claude through the sale of preparatory work These drawings lithographs collages and scale models are presented here together with comprehensive documentary photographs Taming the Arkansas River Sherry Laymon, 2014-09-24 Problems of flooding and bank cave ins had long made the Arkansas River a nuisance to farmers planters businessmen merchants and others who lived worked or owned property in the river valley For captains who transported passengers and goods on the river underwater snags fallen trees and shallow water levels created minute to minute crises The river s fits of uncontrollable rage and prolonged spells of stubborn torpidity generated cross currents and swirling eddies that continually created unseen hazards for boatmen In 1872 the Arkansas Gazette listed 117 submerged river vessels most of which sunk after being ripped apart by snags The federal government had responded sporadically to numerous requests for assistance with river development After John McClellan became a senator in 1942 he began making progress however slowly in getting measures passed to tame the river Robert Kerr of Oklahoma joined McClellan in the Senate in 1948 and they worked together removing obstacles until the project became finally became a reality in 1971 Arkansas River and Tributaries: Arkansas and Oklahoma - Navigation United States.
