Introduction

In the last two decades, internet network infrastructure development (both by government and private) followed by the emergence of communication technology products (in the form of mobile phones and android) and supporting software which can directly connect to internet causes significant information or communication traffic development.¹ Katz and Rice said that the availability of network infrastructure is one of the prerequisites in internet communication. Other issues related to access issues are society involvement, and social interaction and expression.² The problem of internet access is already solved with the rise of internet providers including built in and android products. However, the real issue lies in other prerequisites which are society involvement, and social interaction and expression.
