Abstract: The Finnish social studies program entails an overarching theme of life-long learning principles, civic involvement, and a sense of national identity in students, as well as developing them to be ideal citizens ready to face social transformations. Concomitantly, the design social studies program is highly integrative and flexible, which gives the teachers autonomy and constant collaboration in preparing instructions that will essentialize students to pass the matriculation exam. This term paper also identifies the challenges faced by the Finnish curricula, such as confronting the conglomerated social studies subject with a heavy focus on a history subject but lacking instructions on historical thinking. Eurocentric dominance in textbooks, too much focus on cognitive levels, lacking contextualization, and civic activity materialization. Despite the dilemma, the Ministry of education has strong support for teacher development. It is robust in recalibrating the social studies curriculum as holistic and adaptive in covering school life vis-a-vis academic achievement and student welfare.

1. Introduction

The state of Finland is known for its high community of trust, relatively low poverty and crime rates, fair parental leave system for newborns, expanding diversification, and economic education investments that represent the welfare state's most significant underlying principle: the well-being of its citizens. Aside from having a parliament and being part of the European Union, it is also famous for being the happiest country in the world, and interestingly enough, from an educational standpoint, it is a global educational leader that consistently outperforms foreign countries in the Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA) and other international standardized tests (Eurydic, 2018).

The country has high standards and a holistic curriculum, which entwines their catchy cultural paradox as having “less is more”. One reason for the academic gamut is that Finland's education system is highly funded by its six states supervised by its Education and Culture Ministry and is interdependently working in curriculum framing from elementary to higher education (MEB-SBG, 2016).
