Tanzania A Political Economy:

Tanzania Andrew Coulson, 2013-07-25 This book gives an account of the political economy of Tanzania from pre colonial times to the present It shows the strengths and weaknesses of Julius Nyerere the leader who brought the country to Independence in 1961 A new introductory chapter sets the book in context and discusses current issues such as natural resources Papers on the Political Economy of Tanzania ,1979 The Political Economy of Tanzania Michael F. Lofchie, 2014-01-16 Since gaining independence the United Republic of Tanzania has enjoyed relative stability More recently the nation transitioned peacefully from single party democracy and socialism to a multiparty political system with a market based economy But Tanzania s development strategies based on the leading economic ideas at the time of independence also opened the door for unscrupulous dealmaking among political elites and led to economic decline in the 1960s and 1970s that continues to be felt today Indeed the shift to a market oriented economy was motivated in part by the fiscal interests of government profiteers The Political Economy of Tanzania focuses on the nation s economic development from 1961 to the present considering the global and domestic factors that have shaped Tanzania s economic policies over time Michael F Lofchie presents a compelling analysis of the successes and failures of a country whose postcolonial history has been deeply influenced by high ranking members of the political elite who have used their power to advance their own economic interests The Political Economy of Tanzania offers crucial lessons for scholars and policy makers with a stake in Africa s future

Political economy in the global south: Ecuador and Tanzania Jorge Daniel Vásquez Arreaga, 2016 Political Economy of Knowledge implies the analysis of the production of knowledge and the role of actors policies and programs which influenced higher education development during the developmentism 1970s neoliberalism 1990s and the current period of transformation for higher education in the Global South Ecuador and Tanzania share postcolonial histories and dependent economies that have given their universities prominent roles in the construction of their respective states societies and national economies Just as classrooms and studies at the Central University of Ecuador the University of Dar es Salaam became a key player in the democratization of the country Campuzano 2005 Lulat 2005 In the 1960s and 1970s during the euphoric period following the Cuban Revolution and the independence of many African countries universities in Latin America and Africa committed themselves to the struggles against political and social inequalities and strengthened their ties to popular sectors These conditions have changed through next decades From the standpoint of political economy this research provides background for analyzing higher education in the context of the historical conditions in which capitalist accumulation and inequality have occurred at the global level It also discusses the trajectory of the relationships among universities politics and knowledge in Latin America and Africa with special emphasis on Ecuador and Tanzania The field work done at two rural universities one in Ecuador and one in Tanzania On the basis of work with documents and the positioning of various stakeholders leaders activists in social and educational movements professors politicians the analysis makes it possible to understand the articulation between the production of knowledge within the universities and the shifts in designing educational plans within the frameworks of political disputes and the correlation of forces within the framework of globalization We examine the 1960s to the 1980s as Ecuadorian universities engaged with agrarian problems and professionalization while higher education in Tanzania in that period aimed to serve development in the newly independent nation We look in particular at the establishment of research and teaching agendas for the provincial public universities of the State University of Bolivar in Ecuador and Mzumbe University in Tanzania to understand the ways that these peripheral institutions defined and legitimized local knowledge in the context of national and global transformations This research also examine the political economy of higher education in these two countries towards the end of the 20th century and into the 21st century We analyze on the one hand the selected universities distinct local responses to the impacts of structural adjustment In this section we also look at the ways that these universities have responded to the globalization of education in the 21st century focusing on the importance of social sciences in the reconstruction of the State in the 20th century in the context of a globalized economy Readings in African Politics Tom Young,2003 Table of contents The Political Economy of Parastatal Enterprise in Tanzania and Botswana Rwekaza Sympho Mukandala,1988 Political-economy Issues in Tanzania Meta K.
