plantation labor and health Hall uncovers what she calls a plantation aesthetic in which writers mobilize ways of seeing from pastoral georgic and landscape discourses when addressing issues of race and enslavement This plantation aesthetic reveals deep worry over the threat African slavery poses to the imagined idea of English plantations as idealized agrarian life ultimately shaping the history of both English slavery and the later anti slavery response Recentering the Caribbean in early modern literary studies The Sweet Taste of Empire sheds new light on the aesthetic and the poetic in the archives of Caribbean enslavement Ohio's Heritage ,1996 A Taste for Language James Ray Watkins,2009-11-02 This is a book about the American Dream as it has become embodied in the university in general and in the English department in particular writes James Ray Watkins at the start of A Taste for Language Literacy Class and English Studies In it Watkins argues that contemporary economic and political challenges require a clear understanding of the identity of English studies making elementary questions about literacy language literature education and class once again imperative A personal history of university level English studies in the twentieth century A Taste for Language combines biography autobiography and critical analysis to explore the central role of freshman English and literary studies in the creation and maintenance of the middle class It tells a multi generational story of the author and his father intertwined with close reading of texts and historical analysis The story moves from depression era Mississippi where the author s father was born to a contemporary English department where the author now teaches Watkins looks at not only textbooks scholars and the academy but also at families and other social institutions A rich combination of biography autobiography and critical analysis A Taste for Language questions what purpose an education in English language and literature serves in the lives of the educated in a class based society and whether English studies has become wholly irrelevant in the twenty first century Women of Discriminating Taste Margaret L. Freeman,2020-12-01 Women of Discriminating Taste examines the role of historically white sororities in the shaping of white womanhood in the twentieth century As national women s organizations sororities have long held power on college campuses and in American life Yet the groups also have always been conservative in nature and inherently discriminatory selecting new members on the basis of social class religion race or physical attractiveness In the early twentieth century sororities filled a niche on campuses as they purported to prepare college women for ladyhood Sorority training led members to comport themselves as hyperfeminine heterosocially inclined traditionally minded women following a model largely premised on the mythical image of the southern lady Although many sororities were founded at non southern schools and also maintained membership strongholds in many non southern states the groups adhered to a decidedly southern aesthetic a modernized version of Lost Cause ideology in their social training to deploy a conservative agenda Margaret L Freeman researched sorority archives sorority related materials in student organizations as well as dean of women s student affairs and president s office records collections for historical data that show how white southerners repeatedly called upon the image of the southern lady to support southern racial hierarchies Her research also demonstrates how this image could be easily exported for similar uses in other areas of the United States that shared white southerners concerns over changing social demographics and racial discord By revealing national sororities as significant players in the grassroots conservative movement of the twentieth century Freeman illuminates the history of contemporary sororities difficult campus relationships and their continuing legacy of discriminatory behavior and conservative rhetoric
