under Pressure Klaus Dingwerth, Antonia Witt, Ina Lehmann, Ellen Reichel, Tobias Weise, 2019-02-14 International organizations like the United Nations the International Monetary Fund or the European Union are a defining feature of contemporary world politics In recent years many of them have also become heavily politicized In this book we examine how the norms and values that underpin the evaluations of international organizations have changed over the past 50 years Looking at five organizations in depth we observe two major trends Taken together both trends make the legitimization of international organizations more challenging today First people based legitimacy standards are on the rise international organizations are increasingly asked to demonstrate not only what they do for their member states but also for the people living in these states Second procedural legitimacy standards gain ground international organizations are increasingly evaluated not only based on what they accomplish but also based on how they arrive at decisions manage themselves or coordinate with other organizations in the field In sum the study thus documents how the list of expectations international organizations need to fulfil to count as legitimate has expanded over time The sources of this expansion are manifold Among others they include the politicization of expanded international authority and the rise of non state actors as new audiences from which international organizations seek legitimacy
