Militaries with state of the art information technology sometimes bog down in confusing conflicts To understand why it is important to understand the micro foundations of military power in the information age and this is exactly what Jon R Lindsay s Information Technology and Military Power gives us As Lindsay shows digital systems now mediate almost every effort to gather store display analyze and communicate information in military organizations He highlights how personnel now struggle with their own information systems as much as with the enemy Throughout this foray into networked technology in military operations we see how information practice the ways in which practitioners use technology in actual operations shapes the effectiveness of military performance The quality of information practice depends on the interaction between strategic problems and organizational solutions Information Technology and Military Power explores information practice through a series of detailed historical cases and ethnographic studies of military organizations at war Lindsay explains why the US military despite all its technological advantages has struggled for so long in unconventional conflicts against weaker adversaries This same perspective suggests that the US retains important advantages against advanced competitors like China that are less prepared to cope with the complexity of information systems in wartime Lindsay argues convincingly that a better understanding of how personnel actually use technology can inform the design of command and control improve the net assessment of military power and promote reforms to improve military performance Warfighting problems and technical solutions keep on changing but information practice is always stuck in between The Report of the Adjutant General of the Commonwealth of Virginia for the Period... Virginia. Ancient Harp Seal Hunters of Disko Bay Morten Meldgaard, 2004 The Saqqaq Culture site Qeqertasussuk 2400 1400 BC is situated in the south eastern corner of Disko Bay West Greenland The site was excavated between 1983 and 1987 by Qasigiannuguit Museum The stratified cultural deposits are exceptionally well preserved by permafrost and yielded hundreds of thousands of animal bones feathers plant remains insect remains wooden implements and a wealth of other organic refuse as well as stone tools house ruins stone set fireplaces and other traces of habitation In order to understand the life conditions of the inhabitants at Qeqertasussuk a comparative survey of the historic distribution density and availability of the living resources in the area is undertaken This resource model is then evaluated against the paleo environmental data Also comparative ethnohistorical and ethnographic data on the exploitation of the living resources in the area is presented Subsistence and subsistence change at Qeqertasussuk is studied through a comprehensive analysis of the faunal material that consists of more than 200 000 animal bones Quantitative methods are supplemented by detailed studies of seasonality and age composition of the hunting bag Forty three species of animals are represented Harp seal and ringed seal represent the most important game but sea birds such as fulmar Br n nich s guillemot and little auk also play a significant role in the subsistence economy Fish especially Atlantic Cod have been caught and remains of large whales indicate that these animals were utilized but it can not be decided whether they were actively hunted Most of the game was taken close by the site however finds of caribou indicate that inland caribou hunting was undertaken and that Qeqertasussuk was part of a larger subsistence settlement system Several species of plants were also utilized Temporal changes in the composition of the faunal material indicate that significant changes occur in the subsistence at Qeqertasusuk Four phases are identified 1 Basecamp period I 2400 2100 BC A pioneer phase where the site is used as a year round base camp with more than 90% of the biomass being harvested within an area of approximately 80 km<sup>2</sup> 2 Base camp period II 2100 1900 BC which seems to be the period of most intensive use and where new methods probably netting of harp seal hunting are introduced 3 Hunting camp period 1900 1700 BC where the site becomes more specialized and more seasonal with a focus on spring summer hunting for harp seals 4 high activity period 1700 1400 BC indications of continued heavy sea mammal hunting The site was abandoned around 1400 BC The causes of the abandonment of Qeqertasussuk is discussed and the impact of the general cooling around 1500 BC on key resources such as harp seal and capelin is highlighted

Our relationships with marine mammals are complex We have used them as resources and in some places this remains the case viewed them as competitors and culled them again ongoing in some localities been so captivated and intrigued by them that we have taken them into captivity for our entertainment and developed a lucrative eco tourism activity focused on them in many nations When we first envisaged this special topic we had two overarching aims Firstly we hoped to generate critical evaluation of some of our relationships with these animals Secondly we hoped to attract knowledgeable commentators and experts who might not traditionally publish in the peer reviewed literature We were also asking ourselves a question about what responsibility mankind might have to marine mammals on our rapidly changing planet The answer to the question can or should humans have responsibility for the lives of marine mammals when they are affected by our activities is in our opinion yes and the logical progression from this question is to direct research and effort to understand and optimise the actions reactions and responses that mankind may be able to take We hope that the papers in this special issue bring some illumination to a small selection of topics under this much wider topic area and prove to be informative and stimulating
